1984 Humanoid Reports, the year that something came down on El Yunque in Puerto Rico that caused a small concentration of reports from the area. But the slow down was on. Missing time and abduction incidents were still the main focus. Hypnotic regression was now almost a routine way to deal with different types of UFO encounters. The repeated incidents in Mirassol Brazil was a return to the high-strangeness affairs of the 70's. There was a sprinkling of rogue humanoid encounters throughout the year; they were spread out and bizarre in nature.

A man exploring a disused mine was making slow progress through one of the levels when he suddenly heard a humming sound coming from the other side of a pool of water. He could not see anything with his flashlight then he switched it off. Then about 10 yards ahead he saw a white pale blue short man-like shape, that was giving off a soft glow. The witness quickly left the area.

Location. In space onboard the Russian Space station Salyut 7

Date: 1984 Time: unknown

According to numerous sources, the crew onboard the Russian space station Salyut-7 which consisted of six people, Leonid Kizil, Oleg Atkov, Valdimir Solovyev, Svetlana Savitzkaya, Igor Volk, and Vladimir Janibekov. The incident began on the 155th day of the station's flight. The crew was busy with planned experiments, tests and scientific observations were about to start some medical experiments when something out of the ordinary occurred, out of nowhere suddenly a large, orange, gas cloud, its origin unknown appeared. The cosmonauts immediately informed the Soviet Mission Control Center. While the astonished Earth center analyzed the report, Salyut-7 had entered the cloud. The crew had a brief impression that the orange cloud entered their station. They were all engulfed by the mysterious orange glow, blinded out of contact with their comrades, not their sight, however which was restored quickly. The cosmonauts stumbled to their station's portholes. What they saw left them speechless; seven gigantic shapes could be easily discerned inside the orange cloud. Their political ideals, their faith in Marxist-Leninist postulates were gone in a flash. None doubted their eyes. None questioned that the shapes turned out to be seven heavenly angels. They (the angels) looked so much like humans, and yet they were different. Yes, the angels possessed huge wings, and blinding halos. The main difference, however, lay in the angels' smiles. When they gazed upon the Soviet crew, they smiled. What wonderful smiles the angels had, recalled the Soviet cosmonauts. Smiles of joy, of rapture. No human could smile like that. Then minutes had gone by quickly. As the clock ticked away the time, the angels disappeared, along with the cloud. The crew of Salyut-7 felt a devastating loss. But Earth was demanding an explanation. When the “Tsentr” received the report, it was immediately classified as “secret”. A special team of doctors was formed to study the cosmonaut’s well-being. Hence, instead of carrying out further experiments in space, the crew was ordered to measure its own health, physical as well as mental. The tests indicated that the cosmonauts were well and of sound mind. The incident took place before the “Perestroika” period, and in order to create unnecessary furor, the Politburo made sure that the report remained a secret. The crew of the Salyut-7 was warned to keep silent. No angels could exist inside or outside the Soviet Union.

A 70-year old man driving back from his plantation suddenly felt a presence in the passenger side of his vehicle and at the same time he smelled a sweet perfume like fragrance. He looked at the seat and was astonished to see the seat being pressed down as if someone, unseen, was sitting there. Soon an image of a beautiful woman became visible. She wore a beautiful translucent dress and had long black hair. In apparent telepathic communication the woman apparently tried to seduce the elderly man. At this point the elderly witness looked down at the woman's feet and was stunned to see one normal leg and another leg with goat like hoofs. At this time the terrified witness began screaming at the bizarre entity and ran the vehicle off the road. Glancing to the passenger seat he found that the strange entity had vanished. Location. Near Riga, Latvia (USSR)

Date: 1984

Time: unknown

A UFO crashed into a forest outside the city of Riga (most likely as a result of some inner technical malfunction), at a place located about several dozen km from the Latvian capital. The craft was almost intact and crashed into an isolated area of woods and bogs in an area close to a military reservation. The craft was seized and placed in an isolated area which probably was a warehouse facility for nuclear warheads which was later converted to a research facility in order to study the alien artifact. A specially selected narrow circle of personnel was chosen to be involved in this very guarded secret. Most probably the alien craft was already opened when it was located by the military; its occupants had apparently evacuated the craft and were later picked up by a second object. No bodies were found onboard the craft. According to first hand testimony of soldier V.V. Verkhorubov in 1985 he had been serving in an isolated garrison in the Baltic region in a signal company. The unit had isolated bunkers within the Latvia forests and mires and also a helicopter pad. The unit had underground bunkers and large well-disguised surface hangars, camouflaged by plants and painted green in color to so it would blend in with the forest background. Only senior officers were allowed inside the top secret hangars. However one day Verkhorubov got a chance to see what was inside those mysterious hangars. This happened because a warrant officer did not feel like washing himself alone in the hangar. So one morning he took five soldiers including Verkhorubov into the area. The group appeared inside a long metallic hangar. Inside the hangar Verkhorubov saw numerous structures made out of pipes and also some boxes. On the floor he accidentally caught a glance of a large metallic hemisphere about 10 meters in diameter with only one narrow opening leading inside. The whole object was dome-shaped, with a vertical slit-like opening on one side. At first he thought it was some type of metallic "pill box" and without the officer looking he approached the object and began inspecting it, he found a small rounded metallic object which he could not identify. He was soon discovered by the officer and told that there was “radioactivity” and to stay away from the object. Immediately the officer ordered all the soldiers to leave the restricted hangar. Additional information indicates that the research team finally succeeded in dismantling the craft into 5 or 6 segments and after years of study the segments as well as the craft was removed by railway from Latvia around 1990 or 1991, when Latvia declared its independence. The craft was transported to a research institute in the Moscow area. But eventually the extraterrestrial spacecraft was moved to CNII MV or the Central Material research Institute in the town of Kaliningrad (now Korolyev) just northeast of Moscow where the object was taken to a separate laboratory and studied by a team of specialists. According to further recent testimony (1998) it appears that this disc is still being studied by Russian scientists.

In the Black Sea a weird snake-like serpentoid entity was observed from the “Bentos-300” experimental submarine diving into the depths. The body of the “snake” was about 1m in diameter---it neither looked like a beluga nor like a stellate sturgeon. The creature was definitely different in appearance. The stunned scientists and crewmembers could clearly see the amazing creature from the windows of the submarine. The witness had suffered a blown tire near a bridge overpass and was busy replacing it when he kept having an eerie feeling that someone was watching him. Becoming unbearable he turned around and saw a short stocky figure, about 15 to 20 feet away, near the overpass. The figure was wearing pants, and a large dark coat with a hood. Thinking that it was a kid he turned to speak to him and involuntarily raised a lug wrench, and suddenly the figure began to moan, a very creepy kind of moan. The witness then caught a glimpse of the figure's face and noticed that it was very pale and had deep sunken eyes. The witness then stood up and the figure ran towards the overpass and disappeared up the concrete embankment. Curious the witness finished tightening the lug nut and backed up to the overpass to investigate, he then caught sight of the short figure, which was now hunched over, under the pylons; it suddenly dove back and disappeared. Frightened the witness drove away from the area. The next day the witness searched the area for possible holes or crevices and found none.

Two local young students named Vassiliy and Pyetr had left the Kaliningrad State Technical University and had boarded a tram (probably route # 4). The cabin inside the tram was crowded; one of the witnesses had entered through the rear door and the other through the front door. At the debarking point Vassiliy could not find his friend Pyetr anywhere, he looked around everywhere and could not find him. An hour later Pyetr suddenly appeared. "Where have you been? We boarded the tram together! I saw you enter the back door!" After a brief arguments both men compared the times on their watches and were stunned to realize that Pyetr's watch was an hour behind. The puzzled students went to see another fellow student named Anatoliy Victorovich Smennikov who they knew was a capable hypnotist. Both men told him their story. Anatoliy then asked Pyetr what he felt as he entered the tram, he could only recall that as he entered the tram he sort of stepped into a void, apparently falling down into an abyss and onto a soft environment. After that he could not remember anything else. Later under hypnosis he was able to remember an incredible incident. He remembers finding himself in a large hall apparently made out of marble; however the floor was not cool to the touch. He saw some strange faces around him. Somehow he knew they were extraterrestrials but was not afraid of them. They were of humanoid in appearance, with large heads, heavy "lumpy" builds; their heads were actually slightly larger than humans. The witness saw a number of instruments of uncommon appearance, of apparent medical purpose. Later he lay on a table but felt no pain as the aliens performed several examinations on him. A thorough examination of his body was performed but no scars or marks were found. Anatoliy later reported that he was later visited by the same aliens at least 5 more times at night.

A local elderly pensioner and watchman had just returned home after his shift when he suddenly heard someone knocking at the front door. He opened the door and saw an elegantly dressed man standing at the threshold wearing a brown suit. He stranger had a pleasant, outwardly, typical human appearance. The stranger then unexpectedly said, "Hello brother, I am---Pyetr Ignatievich (a purely Russian name). A normal conversation then began between the two men, touching on different topics, the witness, an Orthodox Christian, understood that the visitor was a "representative of God". Soon the stranger invited the witness to see something interesting. Both then went outdoors, walking some distance outside the house where the witness saw an elongated smooth object, resembling a spindle, totally seamless, without rivets or bolts, standing on the ground in the center of the village between some houses and a barracks. The object was quite small, no more than 3-4 meters long and less than one meter in diameter, lacking any landing props or legs. As they walked towards the object, "Pyetr Ignatievich invited the witness for a flight onboard the craft, the witness was surprised and hesitated pointing out that the object appeared too small for both men to fit inside. The stranger then answered, "Don't worry" and to his outmost surprise the witness felt as he was getting closer and closer to the object, and both seemed to be getting smaller and smaller in size (!). So both easily went inside the cabin and sat in deep armchairs located within. Remarkably the craft looked much bigger inside than it appeared to be from outside. The craft then zoomed up and soon the incredulous witness could see the planet Earth from outer space. The alien man who operated the spacecraft reportedly communicated in pure Russian language. The craft soon appeared to gain supersonic and faster than light speed as the witness could see stars passing by the window resembling straight lines of light. In a matter of minutes they approached the alien planet and landed on it. Both went outside and the witness felt extremely fresh air. The alien guide then showed him a number of amazing things in the planet which the witness couldn't understand. Allegedly the alien society was built on the principle of "Pure Super communism", and that "The men who believed in God and True Communism are one and the same". The residents of the planet were typically humanoid in appearance and looked very much like humans, but not exactly. Remarkably the alien dwellings had what appeared to be golden crosses built over them. One of the most incredibly things the witness reportedly saw was a bust or monument of "Lenin" the father of the Bolshevik revolution (!) and founder of the Soviet Union. Surprised by this the witness asked why the monument was there. The alien guide answered that they respected Valdimir I Lenin (Ulyanov) for his pure and honest ideas of Communism and respected his desire to make a happy, honest and developed society for everyone, like the one they had now in their planet. The witness then asked his alien guide to show him something from their agriculture, since he was a farmer himself. The aliens then put him into some type of flying vehicle that soon landed near some buildings that resembled some type of milk barn. There the witness saw animals that reminded him of the familiar earth cow, but not exactly. However the alien "cows" were being milked by purely, Russian, and terrestrial milking machines. The man asked how it was all possible, and the alien answered, "We use everything of value that we could find in different parts of the Universe". Among many other questions the witness asked the aliens how did they reproduced and the alien man answered that they had sex the same way as humans. However when both boys and girls reached a certain age of sexual puberty, they were made to mate with both male and female biological robots. Apparently these robots or cyborg (cybernetic organisms) were very attractive to the opposite sex. The alien added that the sperm injected into the female robots was collected and then used as medicine (!). The witness was then returned home the same way he was brought to the alien planet. He was apparently later involved in an extensive and complicated series of contacts with the same alien (Pyetr Ignatievich). One evening as he returned home from his job he entered his bedroom and saw a bluish light inside and amazingly another strange “man” sitting on a chair, despite the fact that the door had been locked. The witness said, “Hello brother”, using the familiar manner in which the aliens greeted each other. But this other man answered, “I am not your brother”. The witness labeled this new visitor as a representative of the “Devil”. The new visitor had also a typical human outlook, but with red-orange hair and wasn’t pleasant in outlook. This other stranger reproached the witness for contacting the other aliens, and asked him if they had helped him in any way. He added, “Look at yourself, you are extremely ill, did they cured you from any of the illnesses that you have?” Then he began to enumerate all the witness’s health problems, apparently he knew all of them correctly. The witness then protested and told the visitor that he was “Satan” and angrily told him to leave. Incredibly in a matter of seconds the red-haired visitor dissolved into thin air. The witness understood that this new visitor had wanted to “seduce” him. But contacts have continued, on another occasion he saw “Pyetr Ignatievich” again and after a prolonged conversation the alien visitor transformed itself into a small dot of light and then vanished in plain sight. It was later suggested by researchers that the so-called aliens were engaged in a sort of experiment or mind-control with the witness using complicated holograms and scenarios.

Immediately they set in motion their emergency national plan called DNIII. The lights shone and changed color from one to another in a very slow fashion. The colors were yellow, blue, white, red and green. By radio they received an order not to stand in front of the “object” for more than 12 minutes and not to touch anything, until they received further orders. They were told just to keep the area contained and secured. When they finally arrived at the crash site they saw several parts of something scattered all over a large area, parts of metal, and some pieces were small. The heat now was very intense. Their commanding officer then told the men not to tell anyone of this incident because “national security” was at stake. Two of the soldiers scoured the wreckage looking for signs of life while the other soldiers maintained a secure cordon around the crashed object. As the men searched through the crashed site, they became nauseated and vertigo set in, but they manage to continue the search. They did not find any signs of life but one of the men remembered seeing objects with some kind of writing that he had never seen anywhere on earth. The closest he could come up with, as comparison was the ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics. The area, which appeared to have been the main control room, resembled what appeared to be the top of a church steeple, which vibrated with sound and colors, it sounded like the sound of electricity coupled with a vibrating pulsing sound. The sound was very intense and the men were amazed to see that the rest of the metals in the main room seemed to vibrate together also, in perfect synchronicity...as it were all part of the same body. The men spend the entire night at the crash site. The next day other men arrived at the site, dressed in black and accompanied by military personnel from the USA. They told the Mexican soldiers that the craft was an experimental capsule that they had been testing in the “atmosphere”. All the wreckage was put in trucks and transported to the United States.

The witness was awakened by a hum she couldn't describe. She looked to her right to see a green light outside her window. As she tried to get up her body was suddenly frozen in time. She could still see but could not move. The light took her out the window (closed window with a screen) and up into a ship. She was put on a table and examined by what looked to be aliens resembling that of the "gray" variety. They took samples and removed eggs from her uterus. She recalled seeing a woman with blond hair looking at her but she didn't say anything. The aliens seemed to communicate with each other by using humming sounds but the witness did feel mental communication from them. The aliens "worked" on her for a long time and kept blacking out. She claims the aliens inserted an implant on her left leg, which she still feels it with her finger.

Under hypnotic regression he recalled a "vision" of fire and devastation, being on a spacecraft and on an alien planet. It then became clear he was reporting as if he were viewing from the alien's perspective.

The main witness, six years old at the time, was returning home from his mother's work place with his mother, 2 sisters and their driver when they saw a bright light while they were about to turn in a junction. This light was very bright (bluish green). He was asleep at the time the light first appeared, but his sisters woke him up. On seeing the light he remembered it was so bright that he immediately shut his eyes. Their driver pushed the head of his sisters below the dashboard and said, "Children don't look at them..." After about 20 to 30 seconds the light slowly moved closer to their car until it was right in front of the car. The witness was still below the dashboard but according to his sisters and mother a small man also glowing in the same color slowly appeared from the light and continued coming closer to the car on the passenger side until it was right next to the side mirror. His mother then made a loud sound to scare it away because it was coming too close to the children. With lighting speed the creature and the light flew up into the night sky leaving behind a long trace of the bright bluish light behind it. They waited for almost 20 seconds before moving off. The size of the light was not taller than the height of the car and the creature was the size of a little boy. The motion of the object was at first slow and later very fast.

The witness, a woman in her 30's was alone at home, her children sleeping at a neighbor's house. She had just returned from a work-related seminar, had drunk a cup of tea and smoked a cigarette and then spends several hours watching television. She then decided to begin sorting the items in her suitcase and was preparing to put some clothing into a "built-in" wardrobe located in her room, which had two sliding doors. Moments after she slid aside one of the wardrobe doors and began hanging the clothes she experienced what she described as a "shift" or pause. It was only momentary and there was nothing obviously unusual, but her "awareness" had registered something, and she does not know what it was that made her pause. The moment she hung up the half dozen items in the wardrobe she was suddenly overcome with incredible tiredness and sleepiness. She waked a few steps backwards from the wardrobe and lay out full length on her bed, face up; she didn't even have the strength to remove her shoes. She looked up at the ceiling and saw the light shining, which seemed very bright. As she did this she told herself that she was only going to lie down for a few minutes and later continues to watch television. Next thing she was aware of was voices. The voices had apparently woken her up. There were several voices, all talking at once. The voices seemed irritable and querulous. They were urging each other to "hurry, hurry". They were giving each other instructions and talking over the top of each other. When she opened her eyes the voices stopped. Clustered around the top half of her (they were standing by the side of the bed) was approximately half a dozen "little people". They were males and females. The witness was afraid; strangely she experienced no emotion and no curiosity. The "people" were similar to gnomes or dwarfs. In other words, they were small, basically Caucasian in type, approximately 2-1/2 ft tall. One male was slightly taller. He seemed to be the leader, although he said nothing at the time. Their skin was distinctly "weatherworn" as if the people had spent their lives working hard outdoors. Their color was white but slightly "muddy" colored, and they had very wide cheekbones and jaws. Their faces had a squashed appearance, the way a normal face would look if pressure were exerted on the top of the head. The faces were very strong boned, large strong noses, strong jaws, and cheekbones, strong chins, etc. The eyes and mouth were deep set between the strong noses, chins and brows. The eyes were horizontally wide or "long" and followed the planes of the cheekbones. But the eyes themselves, although long, were narrow and slightly tilted up, again in line with the cheekbones. The mouths were long and thin lipped. All the people wore some type of headgear; the women wore scarves tied under their chins, peasant style. The men wore some kind of caps or hats. The witness does not remember seeing any hair on their heads. The bodies were sturdy and strong. Broad chests and wide waists. They wore long-sleeved jackets, which buttoned up the front, to the neck. They wore wide belts at the waists, over the jackets. She thinks the women wore long gathered skirts. The fabric of their clothing was a coarse, heavy type, in drab colors, such as tan, muddy greens, etc. They resembled very much peasants from the “olden days”. She received the distinct impression that the people were not nice or “friendly”. They stared at her silently, a bit irritated. She had the impression that she had somehow “interrupted” them upon awakening. She thought they were “willing” her to go back to sleep. They didn’t seem over-intelligent, nor did they seem “stupid”. They seemed to resent the witness. She became sleepy again, and incredibly thought that she could sleep a few more minutes, even though that she was under the impression that the little people were intent in pulling her into the wardrobe (!). Later she realized that she was now lying with her head at the foot of the bed, apparently the little people had somehow reversed her position while she slept. Her next memory was of hearing voices again, just as before, telling each other to hurry. They were really agitated. This time when she awoke, several things happened at once. The moment she awoke she was shocked to see that the little people had managed to pull her quite a way off the bed. The open wardrobe was less than a meter from the foot of the bed, and both sides were now open at this point. The room also seemed incredibly bright. The little people were at the foot of the bed and as she awoke they stopped what they had been doing and stared at her, groaning to each other in what sounded like frustration, resentment, acceptance, disappointment and bitterness. All of this happened within split seconds. And then she began kicking at the little people, and screaming at them. Moments later she jumped from the foot of the bed (where she had been dragged to) and into the center of the small room, still screaming at them. She again noticed how bright the light in the room was. And then the little people turned towards the wardrobe, making bitter, fed-up sounds and fled into the wardrobe. They seemed to go in and then downwards. As soon as they left the room felt different. In shock, the witness stopped screaming and ran out of the bedroom. She ran to the kitchen and grabbed the phone calling her fiancé.

The 6-year old witness suddenly awoke on her bunk bed with a strange feeling as if something that she couldn't remember had just occurred, she looked out the bedroom window and saw a tall lanky humanoid figure glide by at very high speed. Immediately after she apparently went back to sleep and moments later woke up again this time looking out the window directly into the eyes of the tall thin humanoid. She described the figure as very thin, with a rough "exoskeleton" or skin, with a long neck, no mouth and large red glowing eyes, it had long arms and legs with four very long fingers on each hand, and she didn't notice any clothing but it could have been wearing something dark. At this point there appeared to have been some kind of mental manipulation on the type of the being who wasn't hostile at first but became 'angry' when it could not anticipate the witness's moves, it then began to push in the screen window. Terrified the witness jumped out of the bunk bed and ran into her grandparent's bedroom. They told her the she had only had been dreaming. Later the witness inspected her room and found the screen broken and signs that the creature had apparently gained entry into the house. Some type later while the witness was in the living room she saw the creature glide by next to her. She was unable to move as the creature disappeared 'somewhere' in the house.

He was covered with a thin silvery blanket, made out of some unknown material. There were several beings standing besides the table, 2 on one side, and 3 in the other. One stood by his head and attempted to calm the witness while the others performed several procedures on him. The being communicated by using telepathy. The beings were of medium height. They had elongated eyes and a slit for a mouth. He was told that he would not be harmed and that he would forget everything. He then saw a light above his head that began moving slowly down his body, beginning at his head. This proved painful. He pleaded with them to stop. Then the being standing next to him spoke to another one that seemed to be the leader. The witness thinks there was an argument. The light was then removed. He was then informed that they had contacted him before and were disappointed that he resisted the light probe but were sorry he was harmed in any way. The witness had been baby-sitting for her older sister one night and had been sitting on a chair playing computer chess. Everything was very quiet when suddenly the door to the hallway opened slowly wide. She glanced down beneath the chair in front of the hall door, but saw nothing come out of the hallway. She was expecting the family dog or one of the children but nothing came out. Feeling a bit nervous she closed the hallway door and sat down again to play chess. She sat for no more than a minute when the door clicked open, and proceeded to open wide, just like the first time. She then closed the door again, and continued on with the same chess game. The thought that if the door opened again she will go there quickly to prevent it from opening wide, as soon as she thought that the door again opened. She got up but as soon as she got to the middle of the room the door, stopped opening. Amused she yelled, "Come in then!" She next remembered the door swinging open wide, and half a dozen small dwarfs swiftly moving out of the hallway and into the living room. They came and stood by her right side, and they all were around three and a half feet tall, except for just one of them, who were around a foot taller. She next remembers an elderly man in a white suit, wearing a white trilby hat, and possessing a walking cane. He wore a black band around the rim of the trilby hat, and a black tie. He came into the room and stood at the bottom of the stairs. This man never once looked in the direction of the witness. The witness then noticed her eldest niece halfway down the stairs, whilst the man in white held her back with his walking cane (if that is what it was). She kicked up a fuss and the witness remembers turning her eyes to look at her (she was paralyzed at this point). She remember saying in her mind, "No" as if telling her not to struggle! I was then led through the hall door, with her feet not touching the floor. She next remembered waiting for some reason inside a white room. There she noticed a young man walk into the room just in front and ahead of her. He seemed to be wearing a black leather jacket, and had black short hair. He seemed to go to the wall where there was some sort of instrument panel. He had his back to the witness, and she remember saying to herself, “He’s ignoring me!” To which he turned and began to approach her. As he was doing so, a female then entered the room. She seemed to be wearing blue dungarees and a white head turban bowed at the front. She came and stood by her right side, and looked down at her with a semi smile. The witness remembers feeling ashamed because she received the impression that the woman knew her whole life, the young man in black stood before her. Witnesses onboard a ship cruising near the Kola Peninsula close to the shoreline saw a descending unidentified flying object quickly losing altitude and falling to the ground. The impact of the object corresponded with a 2-3 (Richter scale) magnitude earthquake. The ship anchored and several sailors were sent by boat to investigate the area on the coastline where the object had fallen. After a search the only things the sailors found were several fragments or pieces of wreckage. The pieces were brought onboard the ship and then delivered to the port of Murmansk and then to Moscow for detailed analyses, which were performed at civilian laboratories. Analyses proved that the chemical composition of the wreckage was not typical terrestrial, instead of aluminum, an unusual alloy with a large percentage of copper was found, and also the presence of an additional 40 chemical elements were found in the studied fragment. The most curious fact was that the fragment totally lacked carbon. Besides the laboratory study by the Anomalous Phenomena Center of Moscow “Algorithm” fragments of the wreckage were also scientifically analyzed at the Moscow Institute of steel and alloys. Specialists were puzzled and were unable to reach a conclusion as to the origins of the fragments found in the Kola Peninsula. Nothing is known about the fate of any possible alien occupants onboard the crashed object.

The 16-year old witness had gone to bed at her modest size single level rancher home when she was suddenly woken up by a painfully bright light outside his window. She first thought that it was her boyfriend at the time that had wrecked his car in the yard, so she got out of bed to see what was going on. She stepped out into the back porch; the light was so bright that it looked like daylight outside. As she started to step out into the porch she suddenly began to rise up, very quickly, she was shocked, at first she couldn't understand what was going on, she looked down and she could see her house and street getting smaller, she could feel the wind around her but even thought it was February it wasn't cold. She also realized that for whatever reason, she was not scared. She saw her high school, everything, and then she realized she was over a nearby park, and looked up. There was an array of three lights tightly together, almost like stars, that she began ascending toward. The lights 'opened' into a triangular shape and she seemed to pass through that interior space.

She suddenly found herself in a room of sorts, it was a huge room and it was filled with people, all humans, she could see hundreds of them it seemed. They weren't afraid either. They all stood in lines and there were other people that seemed to be asking each one of the humans a question. Just one question. She could hear voices responding, she knew her turn would be soon and she knew no one knew where she was. She saw what she thought was a telephone laying on a shelf and stepped out of line and went to call her friend Chris to tell him what was happening because she knew he would call her mom and her other friends right away. Suddenly a small woman, older looking than anyone she had ever seen before, came over to her and gently put her hand over mine and said, I should 'put that down' because 'it wasn't what she thought it was'. She was kind and gentle and led the witness back to her line. It was her turn at that moment, they asked her the question and she remembers responding and then suddenly she felt like she was being sucked back down fast and was back in her room, where she fell on her bed and went into a very deep sleep. After reports that a UFO had crashed in the mountain, the US military took control of the area. 15 soldiers and 3 officers from a special US army group were in the mountain together with other units in a secret mission. A group of soldiers drove down in a jeep to a section called Palmer in the foothills of the mountain in order to buy some cigarettes from a nearby gas station. When they arrived at the waterfall section the men heard some strange noises in the brush, which sounded like heavy footsteps on the dry leaves. The men got off the jeep and took positions in the waterfall area as they kept hearing the sound of heavy footsteps in the brush approaching. It was as if someone or "something" was coming towards them, but they could not see whom it was. They were ordered to be on alert and take positions in the perimeter. Their commanding officer shot a flare, but they still could not see who was approaching them. The noises and footsteps continued. They shot another flare and ordered whomever it was to stop, to identify themselves. There was no answer. At this point the commanding officer ordered the men to shoot at will. Some of the men fired in a cross like motion in the direction of the sounds. The bullets seemed to hit whatever was approaching. Then a lot of noise was heard coming from the forest, and the sound of something running and stepping heavily over the branches and leaves. Then everything became very quiet and calm. A 27-year old man reported how he was thrown into a tree after colliding head on with a car while riding his motorcycle. Before hitting the ground his last conscious memory was seeing a bright light in the sky nearby. Later he woke up and found himself lying on a sort of bed, surrounded by three strange beings looking down on him. The beings had large gray hairless heads; eyes with diamond shaped pupils and were about four and a half feet tall. The beings then stood behind a raised control console and communicated with him telepathically, promising to heal his extensive injuries. The witness later woke up in a hospital bed suffering only from a broken arm.

Several witnesses were in a caravan of five vehicles that were traveling on an isolated road and were observing the scenery when suddenly all five-vehicle engines began to sputter and in a few moments all the vehicles had stalled. As the men looked under the hoods in an attempt to determine the cause of the problem, one of the witnesses felt an urge to look over to her left and saw standing in the woods a short thin figure that was staring with curiosity at all the commotion. The being suddenly noticed the startled witness and ran at very high speed into the woods quickly disappearing from sight. The being was described as four-foot tall, thin, and well proportioned. His head was slightly larger than normal and egg shaped. It was hairless with large dark slanted eyes, a tiny nose, and a small lipless mouth. Its skin was gray-green in color and it had long dangling arms with long thin fingers. The being wore a tight fitting one-piece white suit with an unknown blue design on the chest area. As soon as the being left the area, the vehicles were able to function again.

Jean de Raigualgue was exploring the beautiful landscape and steep hills which hang over the Mediterranean Sea and had sat down to rest near the top of a rocky cliff. He could see the big ships far away at sea. Suddenly he became aware of somebody's presence. It was like closing his eyes, opening them again and finding a man sitting next to him. He seemed to have popped up from nowhere. It was both puzzling and frightening at the same time. Regaining some of his composure Jean cautiously began to talk to the stranger who looked amused at his surprise. He asked the man to explain his sudden appearance. He simply stated that he had come to see him, as if was the most natural thing to do in the world. He just wanted to talk to him. He then went on to say that he had been sent by the witness “guardian angel” in order to “enlighten” him. He was told to take advantage of the opportunity to obtain some clues as to the many basic questions everyone asks themselves about life, the universe, destiny, etc. Apparently the stranger was in the capacity to provide such information. Soon to the witness’s utter disbelief he realized that the stranger was able to read his thoughts. He then gave him a few samples of his introspective powers. Amongst other things he went through some episodes of the witness private life, he mentioned things that only the witness could know. He then went on quietly declaring that he was not an earthman that he had come from outer space and taken the appearance he presently had for the sole purpose of talking to Jean. In the course of this brief preliminary exchange the stranger never departed from a cool, patient and understanding attitude. He was obviously aware of Jean’s puzzlement and disbelief. He pointed at a sort of “ball” he had been casually playing with while they were talking and explained it was “just” a basic technological tool. It helped him perform many different things. Apparently the stranger gave Jean a few examples of what the “ball” was capable of doing. (No details) He then laughed and told Jean that he had “a whole bag of tricks in store” and that he would be happy to produce as many of them as necessary to convince Jean that he was not dreaming. He then told him that he would come to visit Jean at his house that he would have nothing special to do. No meal to serve, no door to open, he just had to be there at the allotted time. According to Jean he eventually had six meetings with the stranger at his house. One moment he wasn’t there then Jean would blink his eyes and suddenly the stranger would be there. During the meetings the stranger covered many topics. He talked about himself and the physics that made their conversation possible. He also talked about the many aspects of the concept of “God” and emphasized that even the most intelligent creatures in the material universe couldn’t grasp the true nature of this universal consciousness, he talked about the universe and its purpose. He talked about the organization of what he called “the spiritual dimensions”, about the creatures that live in our universe, the role we play in all this, and the purpose of our life in its most trivial aspects. He talked about the fate and the ultimate destiny of all things. And according to the stranger Atlantis had apparently existed and pointed out that the Earth was indeed in trouble (no details). At the end of their sixth meeting, the stranger casually said goodbye, went as usual and never came back.

Ante Jonsson (involved in a previous encounter) was awakened by somebody touching his shoulder and he got from his bed. There was nobody in the room except for his sleeping wife. He felt that somebody was calling him and went to the kitchen, now fully dressed and later out into the street. There he saw a man in a long black coat. He started to walk towards him, but he suddenly disappeared briefly but immediately he is able to see him again. The strange entity appears to have no feet and floats down the street as Ante follows him. The stranger stares at the witness with a very pale and long face. After a short walk Ante finds himself at a nearby meadow where a black craft is hovering. The pale man is standing in front of it and he disappears. Ante then sees the craft moving towards him until it is right above him. The craft hovers for a while and then something incredible takes place, he finds himself floating in the air but cannot feel any sensations. A moment later he is back in the garden outside his house.

The figures were about 1.85 m in height, with very pale skin, with dark luminous sapphire-like eyes and shoulder length blond hair. The humanoids wore shiny golden uniforms with silvery belts. On the chest area they had an insignia resembling an arrow pointing up under a half oval shape. The beings communicated telepathically and conveyed messages of future catastrophes and wars. They also told the witness that they were descendants of the original inhabitants of Atlantis. The witness, Lena, felt compelled to walk off her bus route at a distance about 2km southwest of the village, it felt like something was pulling her there. She then arrived at a broad gorge surrounded by rocks and immediately felt the presence of somebody else there. Suddenly right before her eyes a strange entity appeared, like an image, it suddenly materialized in front of her. The entity was bipedal, no less than 1.6-1.7m in height with a body covered with scales, like a dinosaur. The color of the scales was dark brown. The entity had a long tail, which was about 1.5m-2meters in length, a massive hairless head, large muscular arms and legs with claws. In general the entity resembled a pangolin lizard. It had eyes with green irises and vertical pupils and a brown thin border around the eyes. Its eyes were slightly slanted; the entity appeared quite dense and solid, not like a hologram. The whole contact between Lena and the reptilian humanoid lasted about 15 or 18 minutes. She understood that this contact was planned beforehand. The communication was telepathic and they spoke about different topics. Among many things the entity informed her that their race was very ancient, and they had a population of intelligent reptiles that used to live on earth millions of years ago, but as a result of some unspecified reasons they had to “escaped” underground and continue to live there (where exactly the entity did not elaborate). In the same area of the encounter there exists a peculiar stone or so-called ‘mengir’ which supposedly accumulates spiritual energy from ancient times. Apparently the reptilian entity most likely teleported there from another dimension, after the encounter the entity disappeared in front of the witness.

The witness, Daniel, had argued with his wife and decided to go sleep in the thick woods nearby. He climbed a nearby hill and found an appropriate location and there he set up an impromptu campground. As he lay down he began to listen to the nearby farm animals and other animals which appeared to be very agitated. Suddenly he saw two figures approaching from a nearby dirt road that led to town. Both figures were strange in appearance, well dressed, with a black top and coat, black pants which seemed extremely out of place in such a rural setting, one of the men carried a square-shaped briefcase, like a tool box, silvery in color. Both men had very white pale skin, with dark short hair, and both wore shoes. Upon spotting the witness the two strangers stopped and stared at him, apparently surprised and not knowing what to do, both seemed startled a bit at the witness appearance since at the time he wore his hair waist long and wore some feathers just like the typical American Indian. The men then walked over to the witness and stopped. They then asked something like, "had anyone else walked up this way?" The men then continued on, climbing the steep hill. A few moments later the witness began to see what appeared to be lighting coming from behind a nearby hill exactly in the area where the two strangers had disappeared to. Daniel thought it was an approaching storm until he began to hear a strange humming sound. At this point he decided to follow the trail in which both men had disappeared from sight and upon reaching the summit of the hill he saw three white egg-shaped objects hovering over the ground forming a triangle, all emitting a very strong white light. Suddenly all three crafts rose up into the air about 50 meters and arranged themselves in a straight line. At that moment the witness heard a sound resembling that of a welder's torch and in a second all three craft shot away in a straight line quickly disappearing from sight. Terrified the witness picked up his things and returned back home. The witness further remembered that the men had a strange "Spanish" accent when they spoke to him.

Several days after witnesses reported a strange white flash and glow near the local railroad station and the body of an unidentified male was found near the tracks without any apparent injuries or signs of trauma several witnesses including Andres Pulido reported seeing a strong luminosity from which small greenish colored spheres seemed to detach and float to the ground and within the spheres the figures of small gnome-like greenish creatures. The Mancusi brothers reported seeing what appeared to be a luminous whitish "cloud" approaching from the direction of the railroad tracks; it was somewhat oval in shape. The cloud suddenly stopped and from inside several short creatures jumped out and ran towards the nearby fields. The figures were about 60cm in height, had rough skin and wore some kind of uniform, green in color, they had not hats and had hairless heads, and they appeared to have normal eyes and mouth. The witnesses counted at least 10 short humanoids, the humanoids began moving very quickly around the fields and at times appeared to be “playing” among themselves, some seemed to bend down and collect items from the ground, and some of the humanoids then changed color to orange. The humanoids apparently disappeared from sight.

Several days after a bizarre and spectacular UFO sighting over the area, the main witness, a Mrs Freeman called her son to the window. Both watched in silent wonder as a group of strangely dressed males walked quietly up the deserted street. The sight was remarkable: some twelve men and children all dressed in black Yiddish attire, wearing hats of the same color and several with pigtails stretching down their backs. An unusual scene for a local resident to witness. Their curiosity turned to anxiety when the group of strangers walked up the path of a neighbor's house, then disappeared inside without even bothering to ring the doorbell. Mrs Freeman was struck by one other odd fact. The mysterious men in black had kept moving in deliberate single file, a regular space between each one, from the moment they had caught her attention to the time they entered the next door bungalow. Even more unnerving was the fact that the men in black uttered not one word during all this time. Just as they made up their minds to go and investigate, the same black-coated figures came out of the front door, still in single file, and walked back the way they had come. The witnesses noticed that once again not one of these mysterious figures exchanged so much as a word with his colleague. Convinced that something odd had taken place, the witnesses decide to make sure that nothing had happened to harm their neighbors. Their friend who had not seen or noticed anything unusual soon opened the door.

Another witness, Aldo, now arrived and attempted to use a camera. The witness went to be feeling very tired, he felt as if he had just taken a sleeping pill. He fell asleep in a matter of minutes. Soon he woke up with a jump and heard a buzzing sound in the room. Without warning the wall on the north side of the bedroom started to glow with a very faint, dull yellow glow. He sat up in bed. Then a being walked right through the wall, as if the wall had turned to liquid or something. The being was about 5 ft tall, and white in color. He had a large head and round, black eyes. He was in a black skin-tight diving suit, and his arms were longer than someone his size. He had no ears and a very small mouth with very thin lips. He walked over to the bed and started talking to the witness, not in audible way but apparently telepathically. The being told the witness not to be afraid that he came in peace, that he had to show him something that he had to learn. The witness felt no fear as the being radiated peace and goodwill. The witness got up from bed and followed the humanoid; they walked right through the wall. Then they were in a small dark room that the humanoid told the witness it was a vessel that could travel through space and time. Then all of the sudden they were in a lighted corridor without an obvious source of lighting. The humanoid stopped and then they were in a large room with tables. He was not quite human. He told the witness that he was a hybrid between the human race and the humanoids. The other men in the room ignored him and continued to go about their business. The hybrid always spoke in an unemotional voice, and his face was always straight, like a poker face. He spoke in a monotone. He was shown a metallic table with a number of instruments that resembled medical monitors. Later he was shown a hybrid baby on the table with a number of tubes attached to him. He had human features, but not quite, his skin was of dark clay color and the head and eyes were very large. He was covered in a clear, skin-like membrane. The man told the witness that the baby was part of the new generation of hybrid beings. But some type of virus seemed to be killing them. He was told that there were other powerful forces in the universe determined to kill off the humanoids and all their offspring. All of the sudden the original humanoid was standing next to the witness and told him that it was time to go home. He was brought back to the dark elevator like room. Location. Kirkland, Washington

Date: May 1984

Time: late night

The witness, Nina, woke up to see a bright light shining from outside, through the closed curtains in her bedroom. Thinking there was a fire in her neighbor’s yard she planned to go over the fence to alert her neighbor. Just as she was ready to do this she heard a voice saying something like “get away from the fence”. Surprised, she reflexively obeyed and looked around for the person who had made this command, but there was nobody in sight. Next she heard---apparently via telepathic means---a less distinct but still commanding demands for her to move over to the edge of the parking lot. Probably from a mix of curiosity and training to follow orders, she ventured over to the point where the pavement adjoined the weedy corner of the lot. This is when she saw a bell-shaped object with two “chubby children” standing near it, nested in the brambles. Not knowing how the witness ended up inside the small bell-shaped craft and felt a sickening effect of falling. It seemed like she was falling back-first. She may have blacked out during this descent-like phase because her next memory was of standing up, sort of teetering and seeing about a half dozen of the dwarves doing something around her. At this point she seems to have gathered her wits sufficiently to be able to complain about her bare feet. They had been cut a little in climbing down through the brambles, and she was really upset about it. The scrapes were minor but she felt angry about being whisked away by strange beings. The little heavy set creatures were putting some kind of salve on her feet and then fitted a pair of their boots on her, sans socks. These didn't fit very well but under the circumstances were better than walking around barefooted and accomplished the job, at least temporarily of getting her to shut up. She was struggling to figure out where she was. The room she was in was like a cavern, seemingly carved out of solid rock, and dimly illuminated by a few wall lights. Very approximately it was in the range of some 12m to 15m in span, with a tall, rounded ceiling and was connected to a large, shadowy "tunnel" leading one direction and a very brightly lit opening leading to the opposite way. The surfaces of the walls of this cavernous space were lumpy but also shiny. The air was warm and somewhat humid. There were small gauge rail tracks on the floor. This worried her because at the time, she was standing near some and in her nerve-racked condition was concerned about a train coming by. These tracks curved around the space she was now in, leading toward the "tunnel" and out towards the doorway to the bright light at the other end. At the dark "tunnel" end it was just possible to see a row of about a dozen or so small, bell-shaped craft. These appeared to be rusty, brown black in exterior color. Right next to these was a row of what clearly looked to her like small helicopters. Each row of these objects was positioned on the tracks. It looked as though they could move along the tracks. The overall logistics of this was made a little clearer when she paid attention to a large adjoining niche on the far wall of the cavern she was in. A blue white light that seemed to extend upwards as a shaft illuminated this space. She thought maybe that's the way she was "brought down" and the means by which the small craft came and went. While attempting to make some sense of all of it she saw a small train of golf cart-like carriages entering the cavern she was in, riding along the tracks in the floor. Each cart had two seats. She was placed in one of these on the left side with a dwarf seated next to her on the right. The seats were a little too small for her body, so she had to hold on so as not to fall out. A pair of dark tinted goggles was handed to her by a dwarf and by gestures; she was instructed to put them on. The small open train was headed to the brightly-lit opening leading out of the 'arrival' room, and she figured that the eye protection had something to do with the fiercely bright light they were apparently going to enter.

The train left the 'arrival' room and was now in this incredibly bright, huge cavernous space. Even with the tinted goggles on, the light was very bright. Maybe she short heavy set next to her read her mind because as she wondered what this place was she mentally heard the word "crucible". The most intense part of this light seemed to be in a tunnel leading perpendicularly away from them. In hindsight, she wondered if there was some kind of tunnel boring process being used. They continued on through the bright cavern and then entered a tunnel cut roughly into the stone. The bore of the tunnel was rectangular, very approximately about 6m wide and 3m high. At first the light of the bright cavern lit up the passage but this eventually faded away into darkness. She took off her goggles in order to see but could only just make out the dark, rough texture of the walls of their route. This tunnel seemed to go on forever. Her rough estimate was that they were traveling at 20km/h for at least five minutes (it seemed like more) making this section about 1.6km long. Nearing the end of this stretch of tunnel there was a low level of light.

This was enough for her to see that the surfaces of the walls in this area had been smoothed down flat, contrasting with the roughly cut stone in the preceding stretch of passageway. Eventually they reached a “T” intersection where there were some wall lights and apparently some natural light (?) from a shaft on the left side of the “T”. The train stopped there. After adjusting her eyes a little she determined that there was a smooth sheet of water pouring down this shaft. This brought a fresh, cool air and was a small relief from the ordeal of the previous long ride. A tunnel on the right side of the “T” continued on into the darkness. The walls here were polished and dramatically showed off the grains and patterns of the stone. She thought that she received a “mental impression” from one of the dwarves stating that this was the “old area”. They climbed out of the open cars and now stood at the central part of this intersection. Doors were set into a recess in the rock with the wall lights positioned on either side of this access point, giving off a soft glow. She gazed at the continuing tunnel at the right of the T intersection and saw that the rail tracks continued on in that direction. She suddenly felt a ‘tsunami’ wave of panic realizing that this tunnel went down even deeper into the rock. Apparently the team of about half dozen dwarves sensed her panic and stood around her, forming a ring, probably with the intention of preventing her from running away. Her recollection was that these stout humanoids had a skin color of black maybe with a slight blue tint, but at this point they began to glow a very bright blue. It was though they were putting on a display of some kind, like grotesque blue lawn ornaments. This combined with the surreal events that led up to this point was too much for her poor brain to handle, stunned she stood paralyzed unable to move. But the circle of dwarves around her began to move towards the door, which was now open, giving her no choice but to be herded into the chamber. This chamber was also poorly illuminated with the main source of light coming from a somewhat tall (about 2m) standing figure wearing a white robe. It was glowing like the dwarves but gave off white light rather than blue. This was sufficient for her to see that the room she was now in was a rectangular smooth walled rock chamber about 6m by 12m with a ceiling height of maybe some 3m. There was a table in the center of the room that looked like it had been carved intact out of the same rock as the walls. She was alone with the tall figure, the dwarves had left. The figure commanded her attention mainly because it was the only thing in the room besides the table. It seemed as though it was floating just a little above the floor. Its robe-covered shape was in general human-like with a head, arms, torso and legs but there were no discernable facial features on its light bulb-shaped head that she could make out. Standing motionless, this glowing ‘alien’ didn’t display any signs of being alive. For a few moments she stared at the robed figure. Then by some means she received instructions to lie down on the table. Feeling rather intimidated by the proximity of a 2m tall glowing, humanoid, she complied. The doors to the chamber had been closed so she had nowhere to run or to hide. Her body now on the table, her awareness seems to have relocated somewhere up near the ceiling a few metres away. At this stage she didn’t have any feeling of hot, cold, comfort or discomfort, or for that matter stress or anxiety. She was more like a detached observer looking down at her body and the nearby glowing white figure. From this new perspective she could also see that there was a row of what looked like windows at the top of one of the walls. She had the unpleasant sensation that there were ‘people’ on the other side of the windows watching. What followed was, to the best of her understanding, a search through her mind. She could sense an entrance and then navigation through her memories. At first it was though a quick but thorough scan of her life, from beginning to end, was being conducted. This lasted a short time followed by more detailed scanning of certain sections of her memory that had apparently been determined to be significant. The memories along with the physical sensations and emotional responses associated with them were being re-stimulated.

From her detached vantage point, she wondered, why? A mental message came in reply, “for replicates”. The impression she had was that physical and emotional stimuli, extracted from her life experiences was being archived. It would subsequently be part of a library, available for use in replicas of human beings. She thought that was the general idea involved---correct or not---was that “fake” humans were being programmed with memory segments mined from “real” humans so they could function reasonably well in a human social environment. It also seemed to be the case that performing the data extraction in such an isolated location was analogous to making studio music recordings in an insulated controlled environment, free from extraneous noise. The next memory that Nina has of this experience is of stumbling back to the front door of her apartment. She was exhausted and just wanted to crawl into bed and go to sleep. In the morning she woke up feeling agitated. She remembered the sizzling white ball of light but at the time had no recollection of the other parts of the experience.

While driving home to Albuquerque on I-25 North after playing a “gig” in Socorro and shortly after passing the Los Lunas exit the witness (involved in several encounters) noticed a faint glow originating from the canyon pass area northwest of his location, where the train normally comes from points west into Belen. At first he thought it might be the train then realized it was a very faint glow, but he saw it moving, so then thought it was a small aircraft, possibly a helicopter or plane. As he continued watching, he noticed that the object was traveling toward the southeast at an apparent high rate of speed, and seemed to be coming toward the general direction of his car. He watched the object move toward him for a minute or so, and then he became even more interested, as it appeared to move right in an intersecting path with his vehicle. There was not another vehicle on the highway in either direction at the time of this sighting. He watched it approach, and then became very perplexed as it seemed to glowing somewhat like a fluorescent light bulb, not lighting the area around it, but glowing sort of within itself. In the second it flew directly over his vehicle, at what was seemingly an exact 45 degree angle to his car, the witness looked upward over the steering wheel to see that the object was actually a living being, glowing white and at the last split second he looked up, it turned its head slightly and looked down directly at him. Since it was moving at what the witness estimated to be at least as fast as he was moving in the opposite direction, he could not make out much detail, except to say that he noticed that it had two huge black eyes. No wings were visible, as he immediately tried to rationalize what it was he had just seen. The flying humanoid had passed over his car at an estimated 100-200 ft in elevation.

Two weeks after the initial sighting, he was heading down the mountain pass from Magdalena toward Socorro again from another gig with the band and this time, he wasn't alone, as the band was traveling in two other vehicles behind him. Something caught his eye at about 9 o'clock high outside the car, and he watched in amazement for a few short seconds as the same being was again coming toward him (at the same 45 degree angle to the road), only this time it was significantly lower, possibly only 50 feet above the car. The witness again peered upward over the steering wheel at the last split second, and again, the thing turned its head and looked at him with its big black eyes. Even though it was a lot closer overhead this time, the witness still could not make out much detail, except to say that the body seemed to be almost trapezoidal, tapering toward the head, and being about five times longer than the head, which was also huge compared to the body size, and had definite bilateral symmetry along its length. Again he saw no wings. When the witness and the other members of the band arrived at a "Circle-K" convenience store in Socorro for their usual "string cheese" party a few minutes later, he asked if anyone else had seen "something" fly over his car on the way down the mountain. "Yes" was the answer from the two riding in the car behind him...this was the rhythm guitar player and his wife. When he asked them what it was they said they didn't know that, "it was probably some kind of big bird or something". They did admit that it was moving really fast. About two weeks after this, the band was having a practice at their recording studio, which was at the house of two band members in south Belen, the main witness had his son James, then 5, and daughter Amy, then 3 along with him. The studio was located about 25ft or so away from the main house on the property. There was a porch light above the side door of the house, which had an eave roof over the doorway. At one point his daughter said she had to use the bathroom, so he asked James to please take his sister in to the main house. They played through a song twice say about 5-6 minutes, and he began to wonder why it was taking the kids so long to come back outside. As he was ready to leave the studio, both of the kids came running inside the studio door, screaming at the top of their lungs, his son James excitedly told him that he saw a "creature" above the door. They all immediately went outside to see if they could see anything and James then described what he saw: He said it had a pair of arms, wings and clawed feet, big dark eyes and big ears. It bent over toward them as they approached the house and put one of its hands up to its mouth, then James said it "spoke" saying, "SHHH...Be Quiet!", prompting James and May to quickly run into the house via the front porch and front door, so Amy could use the bathroom. James said he stood guard in front of the door, until Amy was done...then they both ran as fast as they could back to the studio. After this incident, the witness was sure he was being “targeted” but also began to feel angry, as now this was somehow involving his family.

A man named Xavier was returning his friend to his house after playing some late night video games and while driving down a feeder road both men saw a figure completely covered in black with a hood. Nothing could be seen of a face, hands, etc. As they passed by it, it pointed at them and followed them with his hand. It was about two feet from the side of the road. Xavier's first reaction was that someone was hurt and needed help so he turned around and headed back toward it. He rolled down his window and it kept on pointing at them and was laughing. His terrified friend kept repeating, "Let's get out of here." His friend then told him to look at how it was standing---at about a 45 degree angle out toward the road, but not holding itself up with anything. Xavier turned around again and headed north again to drop off his friend. As they passed it, it just kept on laughing and pointing at them. It took Xavier about 20 minutes to get his friend home and back to the same location and incredibly the figure was still there. Still standing at a 45 degree angle, pointing and laughing, the witness kept passing by it, a total of 5 times and the last time it literally disappeared in front of him. Terrified, the witness drove away from the area.

The bizarre figure appeared to moving as if it had been wearing "roller skates". It was dressed in a white 'astronaut' like outfit complete with helmet and a dark shiny faceplate; it also appeared to have been wearing rather thick and large boots. The stunned witnesses decided to drive on but stopped after a few meters and returned to the location in order to look for the bizarre figure. To their consternation the strange figure had by now completely vanished. It had nowhere to go since the field had few trees and the road was now completely deserted. Visibility had been excellent on that day.

According to Dave they were outside when he suddenly saw a big, hairy man-like thing with the head of a dog and glowing eyes. He claims it was at least nine feet tall.

When it finished, it started walking toward where the witness was. At this point the witness realized that it was not a dog. It had red eyes, large teeth, and spiky matted hair on the top of its head. Half of its body was a dirty orange color; the other half was dark with blue markings. It had a long white tail and on its face around the mouth there was blood--or it looked like blood to Mackey. As it got closer Mackey went back inside to tell his co-workers, but couldn't find anyone. Everyone was gone to the break room. So he decided to take a look outside to see where this creature was and as he approached the door he could hear a lot of banging and scratching noises coming from the other side. The creature was apparently trying to get in, so Mackey went to the break room and told his co-workers about the strange dog-like creature. They believed him and were a little cautious when they returned to their workplace. Mackey, a friend and his supervisor went outside and looked around for the creature but they found nothing. There was a lingering foul odor that almost made him sick, and there were scratches on the door.

As he was about to lose hope he suddenly felt enveloped in a cold vapor and remembering suddenly falling down and through, he seemed to lose consciousness. At this point he heard a strong metallic voice robotic in nature, "You are dry and safe". The witness looks around but does not see anybody. The voice then said, "We are always among you". Then from behind him a large lusterless sphere appeared, surrounded by a kind of haze. The haze disappeared and in front of the sphere stood a robot like figure about 1.50 meters in height, with angular features, instead of eyes it had what appeared to be lenses, a helmet and three thin antenna like protrusions on top. It wore a one-piece silvery diving suit. As the witness asked questions a color signal panel on the robot's chest would start to blink and he would answer. He told the witness that he would not understand until August 19 1990 when he would return to again meet him, when the witness asked if he could bring somebody else, there was no answer. The figure was again covered in a foggy haze and the sphere rose to about 6 meters and then flew away at high speed. As Cyril walked home he saw an object in the air resembling a haystack. The object apparently floated on three searchlight-like rays, which poured out different colors. He then saw the sphere approach the object and become bright orange in color it then seemed to enter the object, which then shot away towards the southeast and vanished. The witness woke up to see a small gray being floating in the air in front of her, just under the ceiling, suspended in mid air. The being pointed at her son, who was also wide-awake, playing with some toys. She then realized that the little being wanted her and her son to come with him. She agreed and the three of them moved into a light, through the upstairs floor, through the telephone lines and into a ship that was hovering in an open field in front of the house. The object was about 30 ft across and made of metal resembling polished silver. It was round like a saucer with a row of lights extending around the top that resembled strobe lights that flashed red and blue and cast an eerie light on the surrounding houses. Soon she found herself walking around a hallway with another type of being, described as Nordic appearing woman. She was very beautiful with blond hair and blue eyes. She wore a jumpsuit made of a very fine material that was colored brown and yellow. The walls in the hallway were highly polished, reflective and with no windows. As they walked they both communicated with each other, all telepathically. The witness then walked past a room where she saw her son and another black haired boy standing in the center of the room next to a metal column. She stopped and watched in fascination as they pulled a device that looked much like a water massage from out off the metal pole. It was connected to the pole by what looked like a flex cord. Both boys appeared to be playing with it. The main witness continued to walk around the ship. Her next memory was of standing outside the craft next to a short gray humanoid, his eyes looking at her, penetrating her soul. She seemed to be in a garage cluttered with boxes. The gray humanoid pointed to an object at the other end of the room. It was faint at first, but finally it came into view as it slowly drifted across the room. She was told telepathically by the gray being that it was dangerous to allow one of those beings to share the same space with you. Next she found herself in a room with several people standing around. No one was talking and the room was silent. Her son was there too. Everyone was naked and was standing around as if in a trance.

The witness had gone to bed late at night and later suddenly awoke in the middle of the night barefoot on the sandy shore of the Kopylov Peninsula, the Volga River flowing on her right, she felt dry and warm, and she then sits on the sand. Suddenly she sees at about 10-12 meters away a “man” sitting on the sand, staring at her, the man gets up and approaches her, at first she feels anxiety but it immediately goes away as a feeling of warmth and sympathy overcomes her. The man is very tall, about 2.20m in height, very thin and wearing a gray coverall with a metallic “plate” on each shoulder and a silvery belt. The man stands about two and a half meters from the witness and still sitting down she asks him who he was and where was he from. The tall man then sat down next to her and replied that he was not from earth but that his native world no longer existed, it had been “destroyed” he was temporarily residing on Earth.

She looked around and saw nearby an iron-colored sphere resting on the ground with an open door. The inside of the sphere is brightly lit by white lights from an unknown source. She could see a sort of control panel with multicolored buttons on which sat two other men, similar to her companion. They simply sat “in the air” floating and greeted her with a head nod; she greeted them back in the same manner. According to her visitor their planet is much larger than the Earth but it now contains no atmosphere. They were on Earth in order “to restore their gene pool”. Their planet had been irreversibly damaged as a result of wars---they had lost everything. They told her that Earth held a very special place in the Universe and most importantly it held the key for the survival of their race. There were very few women among the survivors and women were now regarded with high reverence. Their war had lasted for about 6 years, everything above ground was eventually destroyed and eventually the survivors moved underground and the war went into another level. According to the visitor terrible laser beams were invented which sterilized women and also deprived them of all their material instincts, even the self-preservation instinct. The women would die from the slightest wound or illness. Eventually their gene pool and reproduction process was damaged. They have tried to restore the ability of reproduction at the expense of the cattle on Earth (hence the numerous reports of cattle mutilations?), but so far it has not worked. Transplanting genital glands had also failed. Their last option was apparently cloning-hybridization with humans. The stranger then asked the witness for permission to take a small piece of skin sample, hair and a piece of cloth. The stranger then took out a device resembling a large egg about 35 inches, quite transparent with what appeared to be plastic tubing inside. He indicated that this was the container in which they were going to place her “cells”. Curious, she asked the men what happen with her cells (DNA sample). The man responded that it would grow into the form of a human child (girl) with their instincts and characteristics. However the witness said that she had to refuse their request to participate in such an experiment, since the child would still be hers and she did not wanted to “be abandoned, without a mother”. The man attempted to convince her that the little girl would have everything, and would be a possible leader in their community and perhaps their only hope for the survival of their species. She sensed that these aliens were good and had a sense of compassion, empathy and felt emotional pain, however she could still not help. She apologized to them, but the man said that she needed not to apologize, because her sense of responsibility for the child was a great gift which was very valuable. The man then got up form the sand and returned back to the spherical object, all three then raised their hands to bid farewell and the door closed, the sphere then became red, crimson and the rose up and disappeared from sight. A crimson glow was left on the ground where it had landed. Suddenly the witness found herself back in her home, she then noticed a bit of grass and sand on her feet, she was convinced that it had not been some type of lucid dream.

The witness was on a canoe trip and had just finished cleaning up after dinner and was getting ready to some fishing by the shoreline. As he reached the shore he noticed a bluish object descending at about a 45-degree angle from about a mile away. The object passed in front of the witness about 100 yards away over the lake. Through the glow he could see that it was diamond shaped, varying in colors from light blue to dark blue. The object disappeared behind the tree line about 100 yards away. The witness stood stunned for a few moments then decided to walk over to the shoreline to see if he could see anything more. Soon he noticed movement in the nearby brush. Then a tall blond man-like figure approached him. For the next hour the witness conducted telepathic communication with the blond being. No information on the report as to what was said.

Date: June 15/16 1984

A. Pyatkin was returning home from a tea party and shortly before reaching the village of Shchedrino, Pyatkin observed a peculiar glow through the bushes. And simultaneously he glanced at his digital watch. Then he decided to take a closer look. And he beheld, standing on the ground, in a small clearing, an object, which put him somewhat in mind of the "cupola-like haze" of a parachute. Later, he would describe it as a "hazy dish." The object shone with a bright, even "milky" light. He estimated its height to be 6 meters or so, and its diameter about 20 meters. Not believing his eyes, he threw a matchbox at the thing. The thing promptly vanished as though it had never existed. But before the glowing sphere vanished, the matchbox had flown into it, and Pyatkin experienced a powerful vibration throughout his body. After the vibration, a strange picture now unfolded before the eyes of the witness, resembling a square with a circle around it. He found himself, so it seemed to him, in some unknown town. It was daytime there. There was something about the buildings that reminded him about the buildings of our modern day "box-like" apartment blocks. And there were people walking about on the streets. Pyatkin said he felt there was something unusual about the very sensation of his being there. "There---as he puts it---"the Space wasn't somehow quite the same three-dimensional space that we are accustomed to. The space there possessed far more dimensions." Pyatkin was unable to express himself more clearly than this. Then, in his head, he started to hear the voice of someone inviting him to ask questions. And once again, we have uncertainties, inasmuch as these thoughts coming to him did not resemble words and phrases. The questions and the replies were directly related to actual themes---the burning issues in the life of our civilization, war and peace, religion, and the problems of the officialdom by "Them" with the representatives of the officialdom of the earth, the course of evolution of mankind as a whole, etc. As to who it was that was talking to Pyatkin is still not clear---likewise the number of those taking part in it. Pyatkin saw the city, the square with diagonals and the circle, and the foliage of the nearest trees. His heart was pounding fast. At first he felt terrified, but this did not last long. Without revealing any name or names, his interlocutor (or interlocutors) said that we had made a mistake when, rejecting religion, we had crossed---too abruptly---the dividing line from Greece to Rome. To his question, "Why do you not intervene and prevent a nuclear catastrophe here?" he received this reply, "We are trying to intervene. And we are intervening." Pyatkin was now growing weary, and he begged them to release him. They did so, telling him that he could talk about the whole affair (but only once) and that later on he would understand why it was that they had disclosed themselves to him. The contact ended 0115A. That same night, at the local Shchedrino post of the G.A.I. (highway patrol police) about 200 meters distant from the site of the UFO landing, two of their police officers were on duty, and they saw a red glow approaching the road which leads to Moscow. Just before it landed, its glow started to die down, and grow paler, just as hot metal does. Then finally, just as it went down into the deep bushes they saw the outline of a strange object, resembling a "flying saucer". Mystified the two officers rushed to the landing site. But they were unable to get near it, as the engine of their motorcycle had stalled.

As usual, the 80 year old witness had gone into the forest to look for wood and to gather special herbs for medical purposes and tea. He had walked deep into the forest in a distance of several kilometers way from the village, ascending over the valley of the Belbek River. As he gathered several plants and grass he got a strange feeling of a presence nearby. With his peripheral vision he saw something white standing ahead, at first he took this for a cloud of dense smoke or fog but when he rose to look at it he was amazed to see a tall bizarre looking woman, whose silhouette was semi-transparent. Her outer appearance was totally unearthly. She had a slender figure, unusual manner of dress and other details which fascinated the witness. The woman then entered into telepathic communication with the witness. The old man heard her voice in his head that said, "If you see "ours" (representatives of our kind?)---tell them we will not wait for them" (??). Those were here exact words. The elderly witness grew torpid, numb and lost the gift of speech for a moment. He couldn't understand what "ours" or representatives of what kind the strange woman meant. After communicating those words the woman turned around, and disappeared behind some beech and oak trees.

Comments: The village of Plotinnoye-2 is located on the left bank of the river Belbek while on the right bank is located Plotinnoye-1; both are separated by two bridges. It must be emphasized that the place of this fascinating encounter is located near the northern slopes of Mount Boyka. This cannot be coincidental. The mountain is evidently an anomalous area. In 1977 there was another fascinating humanoid encounter in the village of Sokolinoye which neighbors both Plotinnoye villages. The area also has a long history of UFO observations. There is solid suspicion of the existence of an ancient sacred underground facility under Boyka Mountain, with portals to an underground network and even dimensional portals to other sacred facilities under the Crimean peninsula. The Russian NKVD (predecessor of the KGB) sent a top secret expedition to the area in the 1930s, interestingly followed by the German "Annerbe" (A Nazi Institute called the heritage of ancestors) in the 1940s. There are 3 strange similar mountains positioned in a line one after the other directly on the outskirts of Plotinnoye. Crimean Tatar and clairvoyant Lenura Azizova stated that there is an ancient underground alien base in that area near Sokolinoye.

The origin of the mysterious semi-transparent woman remains unclear. Was she a denizen from an underground realm, another dimension or even from another planet?

Edmonde noticed that after her journey in the other dimension her skin became smoother, her cholesterol level that had previously been very high was back to normal. This was close to the Katta-Kurgan tactical nuclear missile base. They suddenly saw a cigar-shaped craft in the, which was slowly descending at a 45degree angle towards the ground. The witnesses estimated the length of the object as more than 80 meters and 25-30 meters in diameter. The object flew over the men and descended behind a neighboring hill. It apparently landed, though no one saw it land. The huge object emitted a slight hissing sound and appeared to be metallic. All the witnesses were seized by horror and drove away from the area at maximum speed. The next day a landing site was found amid a vineyard, three round imprints or holes about 0.5m deep, positioned in an equilateral triangle shape, apparently left by globe-shaped landing props. An area of the vineyard about 80 x 30m was completely destroyed. The case was investigated by Mr. S.P. The case was viewed with great importance by local authorities and representatives of the regional Party Committee actually drove Kuzionov to the landing site. The fishing vessel Steeva 10 was nearly struck by a flaming object falling out of the sky and crashing into the waters barely 1500 yards northwest of the vessel. Initially spotted in the southwestern sky moving northeasterly, the object was basically dropping towards the Steeva 10, but the crew claims it did a kind of U-turn before reversing course briefly before again dropping and then plunging into the bay about 1000-1500 off of the southern point (Cater Point) of Lummi Island. The impact produced plumes of 75-100 foot height. The water rolls and bubbles for several minutes after the impact. The Steeva 10 proceeds towards the impact site and searches the area but finds no debris, only bubbles. By 0445am the captain of the Steeva 10 is aboard a Coast Guard vessel investigating the site. Nothing conclusive is found. By 1100am another Coast Guard vessel is in the area with two Whatcom County Dept. of Emergency Services personnel performing radiation checks of the site and island coastline, negative results. The Coast Guard has contacted NORAD and Space Command with negative sightings/data, and FAA reports no known downed aircraft. The final, official Coast Guard report; "It probably was a meteorite. It seems to me...to be the logical explanation."

Five months later local interests and funds have initiated a recovery expedition, chartering a vessel and hiring two divers from a Seattle diving firm. On December 30 1984 an object is detected and the first dive is made by JW. He finds something, about ten foot thick by 30 foot in diameter wedged at a 45 degree angle into the seafloor, metallic, gold colored, "shaped like a satellite dish". JW surfaces and RB dives next. RB describes it as more like "an upside down teacup" with an oval shaped cavity or hatch. Standing on the object RB notes there is no sea growth on the object and feels a humming through his soles. Attempting to video the object, his spot light fails. RB then notices his wetsuit has leakage and he begins an ascent balancing hypothermia versus “the bends”. He opts for the latter via a hasty ascent, spending the rest of the day recovering from a mild dose of the bends. Throughout the day mysterious and unmarked aircraft have flown about the expedition vessel. Barely has JW surfaced and he engages in aggressive attempts to contact news media to “leak” the discovery. Everyone else on the expedition desires to wait until recovery is complete. Having no compressor or spare full tanks the day’s efforts end. Further team disharmony on the matter of news candor has JW released from the team and a call to Seattle for another diver to take his place.

Mid-day of December 31 finds the expedition back on site with a compressor aboard for extended operations but the object is no longer there. Further investigations in the days to follow find mariners about Bellingham claiming to have seen a vessel off Lummi Island the previous evening. It sailed in from the south and after a few hours off Lummi returned directly to the south. Balance of reports suggest it may have been a NOAA vessel. At an April meeting witness HW claims he was a pilot with San Juan Airlines at the time and that while doing his circuits between Bellingham and Seattle that day he observed three US Naval vessels in the impact site area; two “minesweepers” and one small tender. HW first sighted such vessels near dawn approaching the site, on his next leg back they appeared to be doing a search operation, next leg down and they were clustered about a central spot and a couple of legs later he saw them sailing southward. A security person at Wright-Patterson claims just after the first of the year a flatbed with a covered oversized object arrived originating from the Pacific Northwest arrived.

Location. "Gorge of Fear" near Bol'shoy Igizak River, Pamirs Mountains, Tajikistan (USSR)

Date: early August 1984

Time: night

A 45-year old engineer, Gennadiy Ivanovich Karpushin from the town of Krasnoturyinsk in the Sverdlovsk region had come to this area (an isolated ravine of the Siana river) with other UFO and paranormal enthusiasts from different locations in the Soviet Union in order to study the various anomalies of the area which included encounters with Sasquatch type beings, UFOs, etc. Together with him were his wife and young son. The family camped in a tent very close to the banks of the Bolshoy Igizak River, a northern tributary of the River Siana. Late in the evening while his wife and son slept Gennadiy remained alone outside enjoying the picturesque landscape of the high Pamirs. He then decided to venture to the nearby gorge which was called "The Gorge of Fear" by locals as a result of the numerous strange incidents and bizarre feeling of fear experienced by witnesses at the location. His wife wanted to come with him but Gennadiy insisted that he go alone, so his wife went back to sleep. Being a strong large man (wrestler) he felt no fear as he sat on a rock near the River, meditating, enjoying the moonlight, mentally "calling in" UFOs, sending the following impulses: "Come to me! I want to communicate with you! Come to me!" over and over again. He didn't really think he was going to achieve any results and thought he was just wasting his time. After an hour or so Gennadiy tired and intended to return to his tent and sleep. All of the sudden, he felt that his body was somehow under some foreign control and had stopped obeying his will. Unwillingly he stood up and began walking as if hypnotized as he later said, "my legs disobeyed me and were carrying me there". After walking several dozen meters he suddenly saw a bright light emitted by a disk shaped object which was descending over the gorge. Several seconds later the disk landed on a small area of rocky terrain within the gorge. As the light on the object dimmed Gennadiy could tell that it was a streamlined metallic lens-shaped convexo-convex craft, approximately 20 meters in diameter and about 1.8m in height, lit by the moonlight and standing on several landing props (legs). In a minute or two an opening on the surface of the object became visible and Gennadiy saw light streaming from inside the craft through the opening. A humanoid figure then came out of the disk and approached the witness. In appearance the humanoid was amazingly very human in appearance; its height was average, about 1.8m. His face looked ordinary, human-like. The humanoid was dressed in a tight fitting shiny metallic silvery suit. Then Gennadiy heard a voice speaking directly inside his head, which said to him, "Let's go!" At the same time the humanoid pointed its hand to the opening on the craft. Gennadiy was scared but managed to overcome his fear and began walking toward the disk. The humanoid walked behind him, which made Gennadiy feel a little uncomfortable. Gennadiy felt as he was walking within a fog, completely "narcotized". When he entered the door and walked inside he saw a long corridor leading somewhere deep inside the craft. Incredibly the disk was evidently much large inside than outside, several times larger. The disk appeared to be only about 20meters from outside but inside it was probably no less than 40-50meters or maybe even 60meters. Gennadiy and his alien guide walked along the long corridor and eventually reached a central circular room. There the witness was met by two other humanoids. One of them looked almost the same as the first one, and was also of average height; however the second humanoid was very large and powerful looking, with an extremely developed musculature and about 2 meters in height. All three humanoids were dressed in identical silvery looking metallic suits, tight fitting to their bodies. The muscles of the tall humanoid were clearly seen through his tight fitting suit. The aliens invited Gennadiy to sit on a deep armchair while the humanoid sat on other chairs in the cabin. The witness noticed what appeared to be some equipment to the right and left of him, control panels and screens. The humanoid that led the witness inside the craft then asked him, "Would you like to go in a flight?" (All communication was telepathic). The witness answered yes. Then the voice inside his head asked, "How would you like to go, on a return trip or forever (!) Come on agree!" But Gennadiy protested and begged to be brought back saying that he had many things still to do on Earth and could not leave his wife and young son behind. He said he would only agree to fly with them if they would return him back. He felt considerable stress at this point. Only one of the humanoids spoke to the witness, the 2nd remained silent and the third large humanoid performed what the witness thought was a "bodyguard" function for the other two. The first alien then asked, "Where would you like to fly to?" Not thinking much about a destination the witness said, "Vladivostok" (a very distant Russian city in the Far East, near the Sea of Japan). Then the door of the craft closed, emitting a buzzing sound. Something or some kind of engine began functioning inside the craft, emitting a muffled sound, some kind of unseen mechanism. However the witness did not feel any kind of movement, it felt as if they were still sitting on the rocks at the gorge. "What, are we already flying?" asked Gennadiy. "Now wait a bit", answered the first alien. After about 5 minutes had passed the witness again heard a buzzing sound, and the door opened. "This is Vladivostok, you may go out" said the alien (!). The witness then realized that he had done a foolish thing---he had blurted out Vladivostok simply because it was the first idea that popped into his head and he just probably wanted to give the aliens the name of some distant city. So he told the aliens without getting up from his chair that he really did not wish to visit Vladivostok that he wanted to fly back and be returned to his family. After a short hesitation the aliens agreed, the door closed again, with the same buzzing sound and again the witness felt no movement. The distance from the original place of contact and Vladivostok is about 5300 km. That meant that the aliens had overcome that distance in a short 5 minutes at a speed of approximately 1060 km per minute. In about 5 minutes the door opened again and the same alien told Gennadiy telepathically, "Ok we are back at the gorge of fear, you may go outside". Karpushin stood up and walked out the door. The door closed behind him and the disk zoomed up, hovered for a moment over the gorge and then flew away at tremendous speed over the rocky gorge. The stunned witness returned to his sleeping wife and son in the tent. Later he told his story to a group of enthusiasts camped nearby, some believed him, and others did not.

Comentario: This bizarre detail has been reported in numerous instances in which the laws of physics are apparently shattered by the alien visitors.

Comentario: One must wonder how many times the aliens have refused this simple request from the "volunteer" and have never returned the abductee.

In an isolated field an anonymous witness encounters a seemingly abandoned concrete blockhouse with a hostile air to it. A being comes out of it. He is described as tall, robust and with olive-tanned skin. In an abrupt manner he asks the witness what he is doing in this area. He has a strong and clear voice, with a foreign accent. The witness tells him that he is a neighbor but the tall stranger tells him that he does not want anybody around. The witness leaves the area, but comes back several days later and hides nearby behind some bushes and watches the area with binoculars. At one point as he watched the area he saw several tall beings exit the block house, this suddenly seemed to “shed” their skin and become reddish and luminous, with goat-like horns and tails. Terrified, the witness leaves the area.

The witness was at a local hospital after having had abdominal surgery and after three days was recovering nicely. While sleeping in her room she suddenly felt like she was in another state of consciousness, she could see and hear but she could not move. The only part of her body that she could move was her head. Her first thought was that she was acutely ill as she realized that she was in some kind of round “operation room”. A light illuminated the room but she could not see the source of it. She was lying on a small table. She looked around the room and could see a dark line running across the room about a half meter above the floor. To the left there was an opening on the wall, an orange light emanated from this opening. Suddenly in the opening appeared three “persons”. One came over to the head area of the witness and the other to her feet. The one standing next to her head spoke to the witness in some kind of manner and told her not to be afraid, we will not hurt you, and we only want to take some blood. At this moment the witness noticed that the figure had two large black eyes, like she had never seen before. She screamed and her next memory was in the morning at the hospital feeling very sad. Most of that day she spent sitting in the balcony with a blanket wrapped around her, after four days she went home. Later she had to be rushed back to the hospital and the concerned doctors advised her that for some unknown reason her red blood cell count had dropped dramatically, however she recovered and went back home. However she feels that there was “a lot of love” involved in her experience.

His girlfriend has second thoughts and didn't want to go near. She just wanted to leave and report it to the local authorities. As the driver continued toward the fire, he saw a numbers of flashing lights. He thought it might be the police and fire department. When they were close enough to see clearly, he realized that they were not human and panicked. He quickly got back into his car and told his girlfriend to get into the back seat, get on the floor and hide under a blanket. The two figures had large heads; no hair and their eyes glowed red when the car lights shined on them. He somehow knew that they were after the girl and not him. They approached the car and tried to get it opened. They seemed as though they did not know how to open the car. They kept passing their hands over the glass expecting it to open. The driver described the beings as under five-feet tall, with large pear shaped heads, and eyes that were huge and curved around their heads like insects. The driver could hear voices inside his head telling him to open the door. When he refused, they tried to convince him that the car was really unlocked and he should lock it by moving the lock the other way. Then they tried to scare him out by putting images of danger in his mind, like the car was on fire. The driver began to feel very light headed and the next thing he knew was that he was outside of the car and he was alone. The next thing he could recall was that the Sun was shining and the girl was back in the car and they were driving home.

At around 0327A an unknown humanoid entity appeared near the UFO. The entity consisted of a lighted silhouette about 1.80m in height, dressed in a shiny suit with a cup-like cap on its head. The men could not see any additional details because of the distance from the hovering object and its occupant was about 150 meters. The men didn’t dare go and investigate the landing area at night but in the morning they investigated the site and found pressed down grass with a diameter of about 15 meters. 14-year old schoolgirl Svetlana Sablina a resident of a multistoried apartment on Miroshnichenko Street on the 8th floor was sleeping alone in her room, with the doors closed. The apartment is positioned facing a local forest near a military unit. That night she awoke intending to leave the room and approached the doors when suddenly a bright white light lit up the room. At first she thought it was a car's headlights on the street, looking out she suddenly froze as she saw two greenish oval shaped objects floating outside the window. She froze, but somehow was unafraid. The oval shaped lights seemed to flutter for a second as if something had separated from them and in a moment a soft green light filled the room. Two humanoid figures now floated a few cm over the floor in front of her. Even now, strangely she wasn't afraid. She closed her eyes opened them again but the two entities were still there. Amazingly, both entities appeared to be semi-transparent, resembling foggy transparent objects, she could not see anything inside them. The humanoids did not open their mouths but according to Svetlana they seemed to ask her something and not knowing how she answered them. As she understood, the humanoids were asking her if she believed in "messengers from other worlds". She answered yes, that she was a believer. She suddenly seemed to lose control of her body as her hand rose up and grabbed the entity's arm near the elbow. She suddenly found herself standing along with the aliens by the window. The two humanoids were luminous and she could clearly see everything around her. The sky was dark without stars and what happened next she does not remember. She returned back to her senses on the floor of her apartment, near the wall. She felt a sharp pain in her head, she couldn't stand up, and so she had to crawl. She crawled to the bed and slumped in it, everything around her was spinning and she couldn't even call for help. In the morning she felt very ill and told her mother about what happened who didn't believe her and her classmates told her that it had all been a dream. For several nights she experienced strange symptoms, awakening in the middle of the night each time at 0300A, feeling pain and hearing a strange "sound in the air". A six-year old girl named Nao Nishimoto was playing with her friends riding bicycles in the front yard of her apartment. Young Nao went to the end of the yard on her bike when she saw a large round luminous object in the sky over the rice field. She stopped at the fence and stared intently at the object, but she didn't call to her friends. The brilliant object was coming in from the right, and as it became closer and bigger, she perceived a large ring of colorful lights flying outside the object at the same time. To her surprise, the ring was just like a huge necklace with brilliant beads of many kinds of colors. As it approached the front yard its shape changed from a cross to a rectangle, then to a circle. It was a very beautiful sight and as the hazy outlines of the luminous craft became clear, the "necklace" disappeared. The object appeared to be shape like a large bell as it first came in a zigzag movement over the rice field. When it hovered a few meters from the field for a while, the ears of the rice plants swayed as if in a wind. Then the domed saucer moved to the left and hovered near a kindergarten school. It was only about 25 meters distant from the girl, so she could see its cabin as large as six or eight mat rooms of a Japanese house. According to Nao, the UFO had a large dome with four portholes and a small golden ball on the top, which was very bright. Three large circular structures protruded at the bottom. The color of the hull gradually changed from orange into silver. While Nao stared at the fantastic ship, a nice looking little boy appeared at one of the four round windows---the second one from the left---and when he looked at the girl standing at the fence, the boy smiled showing his white teeth to her great surprise. Nao said the boy she saw had long hair, pulled back from his face and it reached his shoulders. His hair was golden in color and his face was round. Nao said his skin color was the same as hers; he had large round eyes, small nose and ears. Nao said she only saw the upper half of the boy. So it seemed that his shirt was gray and a little shiny. His shirt had a V-shaped neckline. She felt sure he was a boy because of his eyes. As Nao watched, the craft flew over the roof of the kindergarten and disappeared. Nao followed a path that led to the tableland or mesa of nearby Mt. Yashima and again saw the craft now hovering low over some fields. She saw the "boy" at the window, which immediately smiled again and waved his left hand. At first he slowly raised his hand showing the palm, then he let it down, and again he raised the hand slowly. The sleeves of his clothing were long enough to reach the wrists. Soon after that the craft began to circle over the rice field in addition to rotating on its axis and flew toward the mountain. When it came to the top of the mountain, about 300 meters above the sea, the ship flashed twice and suddenly disappeared.

The group then ran to the edge of the potato field and to their amazement they saw in the field what appeared to have been a landed spacecraft resting on several spider-leg-like props. The craft was large, probably 30 meters in diameter, covered in shiny multicolored lights, like a Christmas tree. However, as some of the witnesses attempted to approach the craft they were prevented in doing so by some kind of “invisible barrier” or energy field that surrounded the craft. Olga was running at full speed towards the object when she smashed into the invisible wall head on. To her it felt like “rubber”. The group of witnesses remained in the perimeter of the field watching the strange craft, and watched numerous birds including a large goose inadvertently crash into the invisible field and fall to the ground. Olga could not remember how long she stood there looking at the object but she suddenly became disoriented. When she returned to her senses she felt a slight indisposition and bewilderment. The craft had by now vanished. Only one other witness besides Olga could remember seeing the landed UFO, the memories of all the others had been apparently erased. Curious, Olga went to the landing site and there found an even 6-corner hexagonal depression burned into the soil. At the corners of the hexagon there were deep holes, apparently left by the landing props. After being told that she could end up in a mental institution Olga kept quite about the episode for a number of years. However one night 13 years later, Olga suddenly remembered what had occurred the day of the encounter. It felt as if some barrier had been removed from her mind. She remembered seeing the gray October sky, the cold red sun and the potato field. A door had opened on the large craft and a humanoid figure appeared at the door. The entity had a very pale face, devoid of any expression, with hollow looking large black eyes without any visible pupils and very thin lips. The entity was tall, slender and wore a tight-fitting silver-gray suit. He had light flaxen hair that came down to his shoulder. Olga then heard the alien's voice inside her head inviting her to come into the craft. The voice was soft, but monotone, sounding straight inside Olga's head, the alien's lips never moved. The entity then stretched out his hand and pointed at the door. The alien had apparently deactivated the protective shield around the spacecraft, allowing Olga to get closer to the object; once she did he reactivated the shield. Olga remembered standing quite close to the object and peeping inside seeing a long corridor lighted an unusual light, like that of a photo flash. She also saw unusual doors on both sides of the corridor, apparently the crew's compartments. The floor seemed soft, porous, like a sponge, slightly phosphorescent. The alien then again invited Olga to come inside the object, but something frightened her and she began to cry and resisted the invitation. The alien then moved his palm in front of her face and she blacked out. She did remember that the alien's fingers were unnaturally thin, long and white, without fingernails.

The witness was returning from work at the Moravske diesel plant and was taking a short cut home on his bicycle. Suddenly he saw on the left side of the forest a bright white light, within the light he could see a large pear-shaped object which was sailing noiselessly over the nearby meadows and forest. Suddenly in an area about 100meters away he saw two points of light which were moving quickly towards him, a short time later he saw an object about 3 meters in height and about 1.5meters in width, apparently the source of the two points of light. Afraid he mounted his bicycle and began cycling away. When he looked back to his horror he saw at about 15meters from him a tall broad shouldered figure that looked like it was wearing some sort of spacesuit and a helmet. He could not describe the suit accurately. Once over his initial shock he quickly sped away and stopped at about 2.5km away next to the Morava River, there he looked behind him but could not see anything.

In a wooded area Victor Burikov came upon a landed plate-shaped object. There was an opened hatchway on its side with a short accommodation ladder going down from it. The moment Victor saw the object he was unable to move. Somebody lifted him and carried towards the plate. The “abductors” were extremely tall (more than 2 meters) wearing tight-fitting silvery overalls. Burikov was brought into the object. A slight boom followed which lasted about three or four minutes. Then the witness was snatched by his armpits and taken out. The landscape outside was reminiscent of the Caucasus foothills. A narrow valley with a tiny mountain rivulet, and next to it seven or eight plate shaped objects on the ground. Suddenly one of the humanoids began inserting an object resembling a “corkscrew” into Victor’s forehead. When this process was over he was once more taken inside the object and laid on the floor in a prone state. In less than five minutes he was crawling on all fours amidst the meadow he had been originally taken from. Tragically, soon after this encounter, Victor died of an unknown illness.

A couple, Robert (Bob) Blair and Jackie Blair, described as a truck driving team, were driving into Montana just turning daybreak when, "It was out there with the stars. They made people think they were stars. Another man at a rest stop in Montana also saw the lights---nine little ships and one big ship," Bob reported, "moving up and down, back and forth in a lurching motion." The Blairs continued on their trip, but the ships or creatures followed them in their semi. The individual things were described as shaped like about eight inch people with V-shaped heads, wings on their backs. When the things got hostile with the truck and the drivers they shot fine needle-like shavings like silver metal through the glass of the windshield. "They were shaped like a pre-historic bird", he said. "It just ruined the truck". Jackie said, pointing out paint chips and nicks in the new paint job. "Every time I touch them I got blisters on my fingers and it turned into a V." He showed one on his wrist. In the dark their fingertips glowed from the unknown substance they had touched. "We might be dying right now!" Bob said. "We don't know what it is. We have to get to a doctor." The creatures were hostile and went into attack modes several times, putting up dense fogs. One time when they stopped, "It was like a backwards tornado" coming from the mouth of the leader of the ships. "It was like a ray that he was sending down with the funnel. He did it five times, and then we left." "We dint think it would harm us any, not at that point anyway." They drove on for seven miles, stopping two, three, four times, getting out of the truck and holding on to the top to look at the lights in the sky. Then they experienced “little black things, thousands of them coming out of the sky, squiggly things, all around us,” Jackie described. They both experienced it. Then back in the truck and moving the lights kept up with them, even at 65 or 70 miles per hour. Then, things that looked “liked Vitamin E capsules” began forming on the passenger side windshield, as they moved. “They formed all around the window; the whole inside of the frame was covered with them. At first they were real little.” They got bigger, there were big black ones the size of baseballs, whatever their size or color they all had crystal like things inside them. Then there were different colored things, yellow, lavender, and green. They got bigger in size. “It would seem like we were hitting them, but when we hit nothing was there, like bubbles”, Jackie said, having difficulty describing something that was unimaginable to her. “When they hit the ground there was a spot the same color on the ground or on the tree,” she said. “There were one about this big,” Bob said, spreading his arms. He was driving about 60 miles per hour at this point, and then there was another and a third, what they termed “spaceships”. The third one they hit, a cloud burst off, and something shaped like a big peanut fell along side the highway, about 15 inches thick and hourglass shaped. “It hit the ground and it was a dirty yellow,” she added. At one point the things shot a piece of metal “clean through the window and the sleeper and my jacket,” she said, shaking her head, and looking out the window. Jackie and Bob were trying desperately to get someone to see what they had seen. When they stopped the “birds” or spaceships stopped, flocked and waited for them to start traveling again.

towards me and then I saw that he had a pair of a sort of aluminium spectacles in front of his eyes.

Q: What was his height?

A: About 1 metre 20, or 1 metre 30.

Q: What distance was he from you?

A: About 20 metres.

Q: But what was he doing?

A: In his hand he was holding a little forked rod, with two teeth, and exploring the ground, swinging this little fork. When he heard me cough, he turned round and looked at me for a few seconds. He took three or four steps, and then began to give off sparks from both sides, like from an electric welder, and from the other side he shot out flames, and me, well, when I saw that fire I got scared, and I stepped backwards, I retreated, very softly. Two minutes later, as I was stepping back, I saw a box take off, very fast. It travelled three or four hundred metres in a second, going absolutely straight. Then it landed on the ground again, further on, beyond a wood.

Q: And approximately how big was this "box"?

A: It could have been about two metres long, shall we say, and one metre thirty, or one metre forty cms. wide.

Q: Was there anything strange about the thing, or was it a normal "box"?

A: No. On top of the box, I noticed that there was what seemed to be like a sort of dish, with two supports holding it.

Q: Did you hear any noise, any sounds?

A: No, I heard nothing. The only sound I heard was from him when he gave out the sparks and made the sound like "tra-tra-tra".

Q: Now, let us discuss this individual, that you saw. You have said that he had a round head, like us. Was it larger than ours?

A: It was like our head. But it isn't certain that it was a head.

Q: Did he have a neck?

A: Yes.

Q: Was his body thick set?

A: Yes. He was very strongly built, but of small height: one metre twenty centimetres, or one metre thirty ...

Q: Did you notice any limbs, like arms, legs?

A: Oh yes, arms and legs. He was bending over while he was doing that. (Note by Author: the entity raised one leg, and then the other, several times, and bending the knees, as he manipulated his instrument.)

Q: Was the length of his arms normal in relation to his height?

A: Yes.

Q: Did you notice whether he had fingers like ours, or whether they were different?

A: I didn't see them. He had the forked rod in his hand. It was of the same colour. (Note by Author: of the same colour as his body, which was of a dark hue, covered with long hair.)

Fig. 1 Frontal view of the entity, holding his forked rod.

Q: Was he holding it by one hand only?

A: In one hand at first, while he was doing that. After that, I coughed ...

Q: What did you notice that he had on his back?

A: On his back he had a sort of box from which a lead ran to the nape of his neck.

Q: And were there other tubes?

A: Yes, there was another lead there (indicates the spot on a sketch drawn by the Investigator) which also went across his back under the box. Then it seems to me that here (he indicates the protuberance on the side of the mouth) there was a small tube that was attached to his back, somewhere near the box.

Q: You saw him from the back ...

A: Yes, I saw it when he turned round.

Q: What was the box like? Was it made in one piece?

A: Yes.

Q: Did it have angles, or was it round?

A: It was square.

Q: Like a rucksack?

A: Yes ... that's it. Like a rucksack.

Q: And, tell us, Don Peppino, what did he have on the front of him?

A: In front, all I saw was that he was hairy, like a goat.

Q: Was the hair long?

A: Yes ... long. About 15 cms. long.

Q: Over the whole body?

A: Yes, yes. Down to here (indicating the feet). And 57-year old farmer Giuseppe Coccozza had decided to go to his alfalfa field located at about 350meters from his home, to get some fodder for his cow. He walks slowly---for he has arthritis in one leg---along a beaten-earth path flanking the limits of his property. Just after a bend in the path, he halts, for ahead of him, and on the path, about 20 meters distant, he perceives an individual of unusual appearance. He is about 1.20m in height, is wearing something resembling a helmet on his head, round and of a dark color. On his back he is carrying a rucksack---or box, about 30cms by 30cms in size and of the same color as the helmet, from the upper part of this rucksack or box a sort of tube runs up and joins the helmet at the nape of the neck. A second tube emerges from the lower side and seems to pass between the rucksack and the back of the entity. The witness estimates that the diameter of this “tube” was a little larger than the thickness of a finger. He also had the impression that there was a finer tube between the bulge observed at the place where the mouth would be and the upper side of the rucksack. The rest of the body of the entity appears to be covered with a sort of hair of a dark brown color with long hairs some 10cms to 15cms in length. This personage appears to be engaged in exploring the ground with the aid of an instrument. This instrument is shaped like a reversed “T” with two points penetrating into the ground. Furthermore Cocozza observes that as the individual is performing this “work” he raises his legs alternately, several times, as though intent on not getting too deeply embedded in the soil on the path, which is fairly soft and muddy due to stagnant puddles of water. The eyewitness is greatly disturbed and alarmed by the presence of this stranger. His first thought is that it is a “madman in disguise”. A few moments later, he tries to provoke some sort of reaction on the part of the individual, he coughs, hoping that his presence will induce the personage to depart. The latter, hearing the cough, halts and faces Cocozza showing a sort of wide slit at the level of the eyes, of a bright aluminum color. Then a few moments later, he turns his back on the farmer and departs in the direction of a clearing among the hazel bushes. As he walks, he emits from both sides of his body small bluish flames some 60-70cms in length. The emission of these flames is continuous and accompanied by a rhythmic sound (resembling the sound of an electrical motor). The witness, frightened, retreats and loses sight of the entity, which after covering a distance of a few meters vanishes behind a hazel bush. About a minute later, Cocozza observes a strange flying object which rises into the sky following an inclined trajectory. The UFO appears to have taken off from the clump of hazel bushes some 70meters or so from the witness. In the space of a few seconds the strange craft climbs to 500 or 600meters. Then abruptly it performs an acute-angled turn and heads towards the mountain range seemingly towards the foot of the range, as though with the intention of landing again. The witness describes the UFO as like a parallelepiped or a box or “case” as he himself called it, surmounted by a sort of “dish” supported by two tubular structures. The flying object appeared to be of a dark brown color. It emitted no perceptible sound or light. Cocozza then returns home gets his shotgun and returns to the spot. There he perceives numerous strange imprints like those of a long hoof and a number of holes spaced at regular intervals. The witness follows up these traces as far as a clearing among the hazel bushes where he observes other marks very clearly imprinted which he connects with the presence of the flying object. Eventually he notifies the local “Carabinieri” (Police) of the incident.

The witness, Arve Gjovik, involved in a previous encounter (1970) was resting at home alone, since his wife and young kids had gone out of town. Late at night he was woken by noises coming from the door. Going down to investigate he came encountered the same humanoid figure from the previous encounter. It was a human like entity, wearing a silvery coverall, with glowing belt and a black visor and helmet on his face and head, Using hand signals the visitor told Arve to follow him, when Arve attempted to grab his coat, the visitor made signs that it was not necessary. They went out the door and towards the nearby forest. At a clearing there was a hovering bright light overhead and both the witness and the alien were taken up into the object via the beam of light, Arve thought it felt like an elevator. Arve then found himself inside a fairly large craft in a round room at first and then out into a corridor, a wall then opened and both walked through it and then it closed again. They were now in a larger room with furniture apparently made out of the same material from the floor and ceiling, only a bit darker. He saw a table and a bench along a wall with windows. The alien then motioned to Arve to stay and wait there and left the room. The witness found himself alone in the room and went over to the bench and sat down on his knees and looked out the window. It was not dark outside but he saw a lot of different colors. The alien soon came back and handed Arve a silvery overall apparently for him to wear. The overall fitted perfectly almost as if tailored. Then both walked into the corridor again and at the end of the corridor there was a bright glow which emitted a strange “Brrrm, Brrrm...sound”, it resembled a band of light. The alien now communicated telepathically and explained to Arve that they were onboard a “mothership” and that they were to walk towards the glowing “band of light” as they walked into the light, everything became silent and still and suddenly they were in a huge hall where the floor was covered in what seemed to be “black opal”, there appeared to be a sort of magnetic flow above the floor and Arve realized that his feet were not touching the floor and they were both walking a few cm above the floor. They walked to the end of the hall where there was an opening and stairs that led down to a huge green park area. He saw lots of water fountains and trees with white trunks. The air was very pleasant. He also saw a huge pyramidal shaped dwelling or house. Both Arve and his host then floated down a white path that appeared to be made out of white gravel, it made no sound as they floated above it. Arve was then asked to stand in front of the huge pyramid like building, facing the building and with arms and legs spread out. His host went away and suddenly the building began to emit a humming sound, suddenly a bright glowing ring of light began forming on top of the pyramid, it slowly transformed itself into a glowing multicolored light that slowly flew towards the witness and then struck him on his chest. Arve said that it felt as if his body had been a dead battery and now it had been “charged”. Later back inside the ship Arve was taken to a room where he was asked to sit down and then a metal hoop or kind of headset was placed on his head. He then experienced what he could describe as a “virtual reality” kind of state. Two people sat next to him one on each side, so he could tell that he was there in his physical body. Arve felt like being in his “astral body” but he could hear, feel and smell everything around him. He saw how the leg of an injured man was repaired, a sort of crystal was placed over the wound and Arve saw how the tissue seemed to grow or materialize back in a few seconds. Later in a round room Arve rested and something to drink, which tasted like raspberry. Later they went out again and floated along the same path, it seemed to Arve that he was totally still, but everything around him moved. They came to the hall again and into the humming light band. Feeling tired Arve told the alien that he would be late going home, the alien told Arve that to them there was nothing called time, “but for those who live in this sticky mass in this small corner of the Milky way, (where everything is rhythmic under time) there is such a thing called time). The alien told Arve that many positive things were going to happen in his life in the future and then both said goodbye. Arve was lowered down to the ground via the same light beam and then he went home. Arve claims he was able to remember everything that happened clearly.

He then woke up another occupant and the house that ran outside thinking someone was snooping around the house. He ran out the front door and around the corner to see one of the creatures from about 15 ft away for about 15 seconds. The creature seemed surprised, and then it slowly turned its head, ducked down, and made its way off into the thick evergreen. The witnesses described the creatures as about four-feet tall with an extremely thin body. Their hands extended to their knees, and they wore what the witnesses suspect was a skintight suit that shimmered in the light. The eyes were a soft diamond shape, there was a small rise for a nose, and the mouth was barely a slit with a very displeasing look on it.

Three youngsters were on their way to an open field where previously others had reported encountering “little green dwarfs”. Suddenly at about 20meters in front of them a short figure about 40-60cm in height appeared. It wore a scaly green phosphorescent coverall and floated at about 15cm above some standing water on the field. The creature stared fixedly at the children as they noticed the presence of 2 or 3 other glowing figures among the bushes. Terrified they fled the scene.

A motorist driving on a highway saw a star-like light descend overhead at high speed. As the light crossed the highway in front of her vehicle, she could see that it was part of a large metallic triangular shaped object apparently made out of white metal with gray rivets. Three beams of light shone down from the side of the object, which had rounded edges. The object then began hovering above some railroad power lines. The witness could see an opening in the center of the object. She then noticed movement inside and saw a large round sphere pass by it. A round object came into view, it resembled a large head with two very large eyes, and the rest of the facial features were flat. The object then followed the witness vehicle briefly before disappearing from view.

A large group of GAI inspectors (traffic militia officers) had gone hunting for wild boars in the area. The armed hunters were walking in chain formation deep in the forest in clear sight of each other, in order not to miss a boar that might run in between them. When they reached an area where they thought there had been a wild boar they found nothing and one of the hunters had mysteriously disappeared, almost in plain sight and almost before their eyes. They organized a search for the lost man but with absolutely no results. They only found his tracks which had suddenly stopped in mid stride as if he had been suddenly pulled up by some unknown force. The hunter closest to him had seen a faint flash of red light in the place where the man had disappeared, but decided it had just been a cigarette. The next day soldiers from the nearest military unit were sent to search for the missing man, but also without any results. Incredibly several months after that in late autumn one of the soldiers from that unit that had participated in the search operation had gone on a leave of absence. He told his friends that he wanted to see the place where the GAI inspector had vanished in the winter. But he did not return to his unit nor did he return home (in case he had gone AWOL). Evidently he had disappeared at the very same spot where the police inspector had vanished some time before. UFOs were frequently seen in the region at the time.

After seeing odd spinning lights floating around the house the day before, the witness again saw the football size lights in the house. The lights suddenly descended on the witness and he passed out. He then woke up hearing three very loud metallic bangs. He then saw a light fly from the house and into the sky. He then realized that six hours had passed. Later under hypnosis the witness was able to recall floating up at very high speed and entering an object. He then found himself inside a round white room lying on a table in the center of the room. A light shone on his face and several figures surrounded him. The beings were short, with bald pointy-heads and flat faces. They were poking the witness with several instruments. He was able to hear radio-like static in the background and mumble-like words apparently coming from the beings. At one point a large long needle was inserted in the witness navel, which did not hurt, a dark colored liquid was injected into him. The witness was later taken to another room where two white fog-like beings waited for him, these two then took the witness to a huge room with transparent floors. The witness was then escorted back to his house by the two beings, which apparently floated him through the air.

The witness, who had already experienced many other mysterious incidents in his house, was sleeping in the living room when he heard the horses in the backyard corral whining restlessly, the dogs were also barking. The witness looked out and saw several sparking lights near the back of the property. When the lights approached the fence, which separated the corral area from the backyard, he realized the lights were really humanoid figures about 4-foot tall wearing helmets with visors on the face area, and dark "spacesuits." The beings appeared to be stumbling as they tried to climb over the fence. At this point the witness called his sister but she refused to come, apparently frightened. One of the beings finally managed to climb over the fence and began running towards the house. The witness then locked the doors and woke up the rest of the family. When everyone was up the beings had already disappeared.

A couple had been camping on the Ponderosa Caravan Park located just east of the Pacific Highway when the husband woke up and went outside, he then called his wife and pointed out a large cigar shaped object with a brilliant white light at the front coming towards them very slowly. The front light seemed larger than the full moon and lit up the entire caravan park. The cigar-shaped object had windows along the side. These seemed to be closed and gray in color, same as the rest of the object. Five minutes later, three small disc shaped objects flew into view moving towards the object. They traveled very quickly, zigzagging to join the larger cigar. Each disc was gray, but showed an orange or rust colored area towards the rear of the disk body, before a tail fin. One of the discs stationed itself at the rear of the cigar and the other two on either side of the cigar. Shortly they switched formation and flew behind the large cigar. The wife reported what seemed to be an outline of a helmeted head in one of the smaller discs. The cigar shaped object was emitting a low, fluctuating humming noise, which rose and fell in pitch. The objects eventually moved away from sight. The witnesses then went straight to sleep.

Mikhail Evgenyevich Ivanchuk, a student at a local technical college was returning home alone at dark when he suddenly saw a huge yellow object, about 3meters in height, hovering in the air near a local store, blocking his way. The witness attempted to pass by the object, walking on the side, but the UFO seemed to suddenly decrease in size in rise up into the air. Mikhail could now see that the object was round and flat, similar to a "flying saucer", the UFO made several circles above the witness. Terrified, Mikhail's knees buckled and he fell on his knees, looking up at the object. The saucer now began to approach the witness and when it was only about 25meters away, he was able to see a male humanoid face looking at him through an opening on the UFO. He could see the figure all the way down to its waist. Then the UFO ascended and vanished into the sky. Mikhail told his friends and they said that it had probably been something "diabolical". But later he met two female students from the same college that told him that they had seen a strange yellow cloud one night and a beam of light projecting from the cloud to the ground.

Gary Edwards was working for the Australian Railways Commission as a Station Assistant Class 3 and on this night he was listening to the radio telephone (the only communications link to train control in Port Augusta in South Australia) when he heard the train driver say to train control, "There is a bright light above us and we are losing power." Then the driver said, "It has moved beside the engine, went up and done a steep dive to the right." The UFO appeared to crash into the nearby sand hills with a glow in the distance. The engine power then came back on, and it continued its run with no further problems. When the train finally arrived at Cook railway siding, it was almost three hours overdue. According to Gary, the train driver and fireman were clearly shaken up by the incident. So much so, that both men shortly thereafter quit their jobs and disappeared. John Beattie, a spokesman for the Australian National Railways told investigators, "We don't know what it was, or what caused the diesel train to lose power. The two train operators say they experienced the power loss at the same moment they spotted the light. Because they have much experience of traveling through the outback, the light must have been very unusual for them to report on it." The event occurred at the Barton railway siding which is close to the Woomera, joint USA/AUS prohibited area. Local rumors after the incident spoke of a crashed flying saucer recovered at the site and taken into the Woomera area. The next day the sighting made national news on ABC radio and in local newspapers. However, the report never made international headlines, and the sighting was soon forgotten.

In an apparent dream-like state the witness saw a small humanoid dressed in a gold colored outfit come to the door of the apartment building and attempt to enter. The frightened witness ran to her room. The small creature then somehow entered the bedroom picked up the witness infant daughter and struck her hard on the bottom. The witness began struggling with the creature over the child. Suddenly she found herself on the roof of the building with her daughter, the creature and two other persons, this two were in a trance-like state and did not respond to her questions. The short creature was holding a wand-like instrument, which it dipped into a gold colored solution. The creature continued to hold the wand apparently making a loud “whooshing” sound and gradually a large saucer-shaped object began forming overhead. A blue beam of light came from the saucer down to the roof like a “stairway.” At this point the witness is unable to recall anything further. The being was described as a typical “gray” type entity.

Time: unknown

In the northern area of Russia beyond the Polar Circle, close to the Arctic Ocean at the Kola Peninsula scientists detected a seismic shock. Its epicenter was established as located near the surface, indicating that the impact was most likely caused by something that hit the ground, apparently a meteor. The fact did not alarm the military since many such cases are registered regularly. However several months after the incident, a local/military officer was driving a caterpillar vehicle in the area located in deserted tundra approximately 70-100 km southwest of the Gremikha nuclear submarine naval base. What he saw amazed him: an impressive 50 meters long trench in the frozen soil and a strange object that was deformed into unrecognizable mass of metal, obviously as a result of the very strong impact resulting in falling from a very high altitude. The officer estimated the total weight of the object at 5 tons; through it could have been lighter. The witness took some samples of the metal from the crashed object and brought it with him to the military base (luckily some of the fragments of the metal ended up in civilian hands, like such researchers as Vadim A. Chernobrov from the Moscow Aviation Institute and Maksim Karpenko, who claimed to have met the officer who recovered the metal). The piece of metal resembled steel by its outer appearance and weight but had an unusual yellowish tint. Speculation was that the object was just a stage of a Soviet missile launched from Plesetsk. But reliable sources insist that it was an authentic UFO---a piloted alien spacecraft with a humanoid crew onboard that was shot down in a space dogfight with other aliens and entered earth's atmosphere over the Arctic Ocean and crashed at very high speed. Due to the tremendous impact the inner structure of the alien spacecraft that was originally disk or dome shaped, about 6-10 meters in diameter, including its humanoid crew, burned and melted to a charred blackened state and no remains of the crew was found. Reportedly after a rumor spread to the higher military command that the wreckage was also reportedly seen by some civilians (geologists and local reindeer breeders) in spring or summer 1985, a retrieval operation was organized using helicopters and military personnel. The deformed wreckage was loaded and supposedly transported to the bunker at Kapustin Yar central range Nr 4 in southern Russia (Astrakhan Province), where it is hidden today along with the wreckage of other crashed alien spacecraft. A second source, (Mr. Alexander Nosenko) also indicate the year of the crash as 1984, reporting that the object was definitely a extraterrestrial spacecraft and the recovered sample of alien technology considerably promoted Soviet science, research and development engineering in such fields as alloys, construction materials, etc.

The figure was completely black in color with only its shining eyes visible. A strange beam of light seemed to emanate from its eyes; it was about 20-30 cm long. The craft was lighted from inside. The entity’s hands were bent at a level with the hips. The boy stood frozen for about 2 minutes then ran home terrified.
